SECRETARY'S REPORT.

To the Class of Seventy-Eight.

IN my report that I now offer you I have decided to let most of you tell your own stories, and though in my circulars I have asked you to tell connected ones, some of you have been rather abrupt in your replies. I have thought best to omit the actual dates of each communication, for though it is now some months since many of you wrote me last, the present tense wherever used applies to some time within the past year, unless otherwise stated.

Four of our Class have received their A.B. degrees, as of 1878, since we left College, bringing the total number of graduates up to 147. Among these four was one man whose name was printed in the list of A.B.'s on our Commencement programme, but who did not get his degree till 1879.

A few who graduated are lost, as the records will show; but several who were lying hid showed themselves after repeated appeals from me. Of members of the Class who did not graduate, the proportion of those lost and hiding is of course much larger, for many, who stayed with us but a few weeks or months, felt that the ties that bound them to the Class were so slight that they were broken when they left the College and Cambridge; and then, too, it is hardly reasonable for the Secretary of our Class to expect communications from many of those who were ever connected with the "glorious Class of Seventy-Seven" (of whom we had a goodly sprinkling) when they can report themselves to the Secretary of that Class, though, thanks to Mr. Russell, Seventy-Seven's Secretary, I am enabled to make my records much more complete in this direction than they would otherwise be.

I suppose there are some among us who are so innately modest that they dislike the idea of any printed mention of themselves, and this I judge to be the reason why some answers to my inquiries were delayed so long, and others are still wanting. There are some names, that, closely identified with our Class in most respects, I am against my will obliged to place among "Members not Graduates;" but the Faculty had to draw the line somewhere, though I can but think that they were feeling out of sorts when they drew it.

It may be a surprise to some to learn, that, though we have thirty-six lawyers among our graduates, and fifteen among those who did not graduate with us, we are considerably below the average of the classes near us, in lawyers. Seventy-Six has 37 per cent among its graduates, and a total of 32 per cent, including all members. Seventy-Seven has, graduates 31 per cent, total 26 per cent. Seventy-Nine has, graduates 39 per cent; and we, graduates 25 per cent, and total 24 per cent.

That over one quarter of us are married, would tend to show that our business prospects have not been as bad as the condition of the Class Fund has seemed to indicate. The month of June appears to have found favor among our marrying graduates, for out of the thirty-seven who have married, eleven have selected June as the month in which to do so.

Death has dealt lightly with us since our Commencement, and we have lost but four of our graduates, while I have heard of the death of but one of our other members. And though we have lost so few, we could ill afford to spare those who were taken; but as time runs on we must expect to see our ranks gradually thinned, and those of us who are left will look back on the many pleasant memories of those who are gone, till a Commencement day will come that will number the Class of Seventy-Eight as something belonging to the past; but while we stay let us say with Horace, —

> "Quid sit futurum cras fuge quaerere, et
> Quem Fors dierum cunque dabit lucro > Appone." . . .

I hope you all will bring to my notice the errors in dates, names, etc., that no work of this nature is complete without; and I want to thank those of you who have aided me in preparing this report by promptly answering my inquiries, and in other ways.

Let me offer all of you my best wishes for your future, and believe me,

Sincerely your Classmate,

JOSEPH C. WHITNEY.

EIGHTEEN HUNDRED AND SEVENTY-EIGHT.

Records.

CHARLES THORNTON ADAMS.

Born at Jamaica Plain, Mass., November 28, 1856. Studied law at the Columbia Law School, where he graduated in May, 1880. Was admitted to the Bar, October 29, 1880; and has since practised law in New York City, with an office first at 287 Broadway, and now in Temple Court.

"I was married to Alice Kent Hanks, at Cambridge, Mass., January 9, 1884. Am living at Woodside, Long Island."

His address is 7 Beekman Street, New York.

RICHARD SEABROOK ALBERT.

Born at Baltimore, Md., October 22, 1854. "After graduating with the Class of '78 I went to Europe, where I spent a year travelling and studying the languages; and returning, studied two years at the Harvard Law School. In the autumn of 1881 I was admitted to the Baltimore Bar, and have since then been pursuing the practice of the law."

His office is 48 Lexington Avenue. Is living at the Mount Vernon Hotel.

ANDREW HUSSEY ALLEN.

Born at New York, December 6, 1855. "From July 1, 1881, to July 20, 1882, I was Head of Division C, of the Consular Bureau, Department of State. Since the latter date I have been, as I am still, Disbursing Agent of the Court of Commissioners of Alabama Claims. I am also Treasurer of the Harvard Club of Washington, lately organized.

"To cover the period from graduation to the first date above mentioned, I may add that I studied law at the Columbia Law School of New York City for the year immediately following graduation. In November, 1879, I went South, where I remained practically idle until September 15, 1880, when I came to Washington to accept a position in the Department of State. On the 1st of May, 1881, I received my first promotion; and, as I have already stated, I was made head of a Division on the 1st of the following July."

His address is 1412 H Street.

WILLIAM ETHAN ALLEN.

Born at Worcester, Mass., November 22, 1856. "The year after graduation I spent in Europe, and returned to Worcester with no particular occupation. Almost the only event in my life since leaving College is that the number of my post-office box, formerly 1057, has been changed to 43. I have no business nor profession, and the most of my time I pass in Worcester merely vegetating."

WILLIAM HALL ALLEN.

Born at Old Saybrook, Conn., October 30, 1857. "After leaving College, I spent two years in deciding whether or not to study law; meanwhile I lived at Saybrook, Conn., my father's home, till November 11, 1880, enjoying life and travelling West and in the East. I then came to New York and entered the house of Messrs. A. D. Juilliard & Co., 66 and 68 Worth Street, who are in the dry goods commission business, beginning in the office at a day-book. In March, 1881, I came out into the dress goods department, where I kept the books till December of the same year, when I was made salesman for Boston and New England. I kept that position a year and was then appointed, January 1, 1883, the general salesman for the West for our department, which position I now hold.

"I have no additions to make save that in this ungodly country where I am travelling around as our Western salesman, it is hard to keep in a proper frame of mind. This position is a very good one, but it necessitates my living on sleeping cars for six months in the year, but with little to do the balance of the time except stay in New York. Though possibly deserving some degrees or honors, never had the pleasure of receiving any except that of A.B.

"Beyond the above my life has been very uneventful, but devoted to a great deal of solid work."

WILLIS BOYD ALLEN.

Born at Kittery, Maine, July 9, 1855. "After leaving College I was at the Boston University Law School, where I graduated in June, 1881, with the degree of LL.B., delivering the class oration, — subject, 'The Common Law in Common Life.' Since 1881 have practised law, as a member of the firm of Allen, Heminway, & Savage, 5 Tremont Street, Boston. Am interested in the 'Cottage Hearth,' a monthly magazine, published at 11 Bromfield Street. Have contributed articles to Boston dailies and Sunday issues,

'Lippincott's,' 'St. Nicholas,' Harper's 'Young People,' 'Continent,' 'Peterson's,' 'Youth's Companion,' 'Christian Union,' 'Churchman,' and various other periodicals in New York and Philadelphia. Held position on Governor Long's Staff, 1881–82 (Assistant Quartermaster General, with rank of Lieutenant-Colonel)."

Is living at 575 Columbus Avenue.

EDWARD RICHARDSON BACON.

Born at Chicago, February 22, 1857. Was clerk in the office of Bacon & Co., of Chicago, and then member of the firm of McCourtie & Bacon, commission merchants, who succeeded them in the business, with their office at the corner of Washington Street and Fifth Avenue. "See Commercial Report for standing."

Married, October 9, 1879, to Clara Cram.

EDWIN SWIFT BALCH.

Born at Philadelphia, Pa., March 27, 1856. Entered the Class Junior year. He studied law with William Henry Rawle, Esq., of Philadelphia, and passed the first two summers after graduating, at Mt. Desert, and the third "in the Alps, walking through them; also went to Algeria.

"I spent the summer of 1881 travelling in Russia, Norway, and Sweden. Was admitted to the Philadelphia Bar, May, 1881, and practised law the following winter (office, 631 Walnut Street). Spent the summer of 1882 walking in Switzerland; the winter of 1882–83 studied painting under Thomas Eakins, in Academy of Fine Arts, in Philadelphia, which I am still doing. Have a studio at 1520 Chestnut Street. Spent the summer of 1883 at Mt. Desert."

Is living at 1412 Spruce Street.

WILLIAM AMOS BANCROFT.

Born at Groton, Mass., April 26, 1855. Passed a year studying law in the office of William T. Brigham, Esq., and then became a special student in the Harvard Law School. March 31, 1879, was made Captain of Company B, Fifth Regiment M.V.M.

"I remained in the Harvard Law School during the academic year 1880–81. In July, 1881, Edward F. Johnson, our classmate, and myself opened a law office at 15 Pemberton Square, Boston, where we practised and studied law together until we were admitted to the Suffolk Bar in November, 1881, when we continued practice at the same place, although not as partners, until last summer [1883], when Johnson gave up his Boston office and confined himself to his home office at Woburn, where he is clerk of the District Court. I am still at 15 Pemberton Square. For about a year I was a partner of Charles F. Chamberlayne, a classmate, beginning in the spring of 1882, office on Brattle Street, Cambridge.

"Besides practising law, I have been the Harvard correspondent for the Boston 'Herald' and for the New York 'Herald' and 'Times.' I gave up the proctorship at Harvard, which I held for three years, in the fall of 1881. Have coached the Harvard 'Varsity' crews of '82 and '83, and the Freshman crews of '81, '82, and '83, together with a number of the other class crews, devoting an hour or two daily to the work during six or seven months of each college year.

"Was elected a member of the Cambridge Common Council in the fall of 1881, and served one year in that body. In the fall of 1882 I was elected a member of the Massachusetts House of Representatives, and served during the session of 1883, — the longest session on record, from January 3 to July 27, Benjamin F. Butler, Governor!!! — as chairman of the Military Committee and as a member of the Probate and Chancery Committee. I was re-elected from the same district, which includes Old Cambridge and the College, last November [1883]. On February 7, 1882, I was elected Colonel of the Fifth Regiment of Infantry, M.V.M., which position I now hold." He was again elected representative to the Legislature in November, 1884.

"Have lived in Cambridge since our Class was graduated.

"Married, January 18, 1879, at Cambridge, to Mary Shaw, of Boston.

"Born, September 13, 1879, a son, Hugh; born, November 29, 1880, a son, Guy."

CHARLES FOSTER BATCHELDER.

Born at Cambridge, July 20, 1856. "After graduating I entered the Lawrence Scientific School, where I remained one year. The following year (1879–80) my studies were interrupted by sickness. In the autumn of 1880 I returned to the Scientific School, and continued my studies there until 1882, when I received the degree of M.M.S. The greater part of the following year (1882–83) I was out West in New Mexico, Arizona, California, and Colorado."

Is living at 7 Kirkland Street, Cambridge.

WILLIAM ZEBINA BENNETT.

Born at Montpelier, Vt., February 25, 1856. "Remained in Cambridge from September 1, 1878, to January 1, 1880, studying for the degree of Ph.D. and acting as Assistant in Chemistry. Also assisted Mr. C. F. Mabery in conducting the summer school in 1879 and 1880. Published with Professor H. B. Hill a paper on 'Di-Chlor Acrylic Acid and Mucochloric Acid and their Derivatives.' In January, 1880, went to De Veaux College, Suspension Bridge, New York, as master of Science and Mathematics, and remained until the close of the academic year. In September, 1880, I was appointed Assistant-Professor of Chemistry at Wooster University, Wooster, Ohio. In July, 1883, on the retirement of the full professor, I was regularly and permanently appointed full Professor of Natural Science in the University of Wooster. In June, 1881, I received the degree of A.M. from Harvard. In June, 1883, I received the degree of Ph.D. from this (Wooster) university, both for advanced work in chemistry. I am making money enough to live, but am not getting rich. My salary at present is $1,500 a year. I was elected Professor of Natural Sciences at Louisville in 1881 and Professor of Chemistry at Perdue University, Lafayette, Ind., in 1883, but declined both.

"I was married in Wooster, August 14, 1884, to Miss Minnie Sinclair Proctor, daughter of Rev. John O. Proctor, of that city."

FREDERIC DE BILLIER.

Born at New York, December 16, 1856. "Three months in Wall Street, three months in Texas; since August, 1879, in Wyoming, stock-raising and ranching with H. E. and A. M. Teschemacher." Is "located" on Cottonwood Creek, some hundred miles north of Cheyenne. His ranch address is Bordeaux post-office, which is forty-five miles from the home ranch. In 1881 a joint-stock company was formed, under the laws of Wyoming, to raise cattle and prepare them for market, with the title of the Teschemacher & De Billier Cattle Co. In 1882, by an act of the legislature, the authorized capital was increased to $750,000, of which $491,600 is paid up. Is Treasurer of the Company, who have an office in Cheyenne, where one officer of the Corporation is always to be found, and where letters may be addressed.

CHARLES CHAUNCEY BINNEY.

Born at Philadelphia, October 20, 1855. "Three days after graduation I sailed for Europe, spent the summer in Switzerland, the autumn in northern Italy, Corsica, Sicily, and Malta, the winter in Egypt, and the spring chiefly in Greece and Italy. Returned to Philadelphia in June, 1879. Was entered as a student at law there. Went to Europe again in June, 1880, and spent the summer chiefly in Switzerland and the Tyrol. Returned in November. I then studied law at the office of Wm. Henry Rawle, Esq., in Philadelphia. Since February 3, 1881, I have killed time in a comparatively pleasant way, and achieved nothing. The only incident worth chronicling is that I was admitted to the Bar on July 2, 1881. Office address, 710 Walnut Street. Residence, 2020 De Lancey Place. (More permanent direction, Social Art Club.)"

EMMONS BLAINE.

Born at Augusta, Me., August 7, 1857. "Was two years in the Harvard Law School. In November, 1880, went to Chicago, where I was clerk in the office of the General Manager of the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad. I am still with the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad Company, and at present am enjoying the title of 'Division Freight Agent for the Iowa Division.'

"My address is Eagle Grove, Iowa."

These two clippings from Boston papers may be of interest to Emmons himself as well as to others:—

"New Haven, Conn., September 21, 1884. Cases of bunco men following in Mr. Blaine's train have come to light. William Berry, a farmer of Naugatuck Valley, lost $50 on a card game, to which he was introduced by a young man who pretended to be Emmons Blaine."

"September 26, 1884. A Connecticut farmer went to New York to see Mr. Blaine pass through, and buy a silk dress for his wife. He was met at the railway station by a well-dressed, smooth-spoken young man, who claimed to be no less a personage than Mr. Blaine's son. Dazzled by the unexpected honor, the honest farmer, who is likewise a deacon, allowed himself an unwonted indulgence in cigars and drinks. From narcotics and stimulants it was but a single step to cards. The pleasure of knowing Mr. Blaine's son a few minutes cost the worthy deacon $50. His wife did not get her silk dress, but he got a piece of her mind that reached from nearly candle-light to breakfast time."

LAFAYETTE GILBERT BLAIR.

Born at Cumberland, Md., May 8, 1849. "I entered the law office of Hale, Walcott, & Perkins, 39 Court Street, Boston, September 23, 1878, in the capacity of clerk on salary, and remained there until the latter part of November, 1881. Attended the lectures of the Boston Law School one term, namely, the latter term of 1881; was examined for admission to the Suffolk Bar, May 14, 1881, and regularly admitted to practice June 14, 1881. Opened an evening office, September 1, 1881, in Lyceum Building, Harvard Square, Cambridge, and a regular office in the New York Mutual Building, corner of Milk and Pearl Streets, Boston. Was counsel for the Megantic Consolidated Copper Mining Company, until the company passed into the hands of New York parties and was dissolved.

"Have written a few articles for the newspaper, — including some so-called poetry, — but nothing of such importance as to deserve mention.

"I hold the office of Senior Warden in Mount Olivet Lodge F. and A. M., Cambridge; am also Royal Arch Captain in Cambridge Chapter of Royal Arch Masons. Am one of the Inspectors of Election for Ward One in Cambridge. Was associated, as senior partner, with Charles H. Wiswell for first year, and with Clinton W. Lucas for second year, of law practice.

"Am now alone, my quondam partners having grown rich out of the business, and retired to the profession of teaching. The only item of real interest is that I've managed to live and pay office rent out of my law practice. There is food for thought in that."

He is living at 34 North Avenue, Cambridge.

WARREN KENDALL BLODGETT.

Born at Boston, June 22, 1855. "I spent three years, after leaving College, in the Harvard Law School. The next year I spent as a student in the office of Morse & Stone, Boston. October 1, 1882, I was appointed Assistant U. S. Attorney for the Massachusetts District, and am still holding that position, and doing such outside work as young lawyers occasionally get.

"I was married in Boston, November 3, 1881, to Miss Mary Durant Priest, of Boston, and settled in Cambridge in my present home, 70 North Avenue."

GEORGE KEELY BOUTELLE.

Born at Waterville, Maine, March 15, 1857. "Entered the Law School directly after graduating. The year 1880 I spent at home. Since taking my degree at the Harvard Law School in 1882, I have left that profession and adopted the profession of naval architecture, which I am now studying."

His home is at Waterville, Maine.

FRANK ELIOT BRADISH.

Born at Jamaica Plain, Mass., August 12, 1855. "I was in the Class four years, but did not get my A.B. until 1880, remaining, however, in the Class of '78 while in College. I studied irregularly from 1878 to 1881 at the Harvard Law School, and then nearly a year in the office of ex-Governor Gaston. I was admitted to the Bar in Suffolk County in June, 1882, and at once began the practice of the profession, in which, it is needless to say, I have not yet distinguished myself.

"I still reside in Cambridge."

ARTHUR HENRY BROWN.

Born at East Princeton, Mass., June 19, 1853. Not heard from. Blair writes of him as follows:—

"Brown very suddenly and mysteriously disappeared from this vicinity, about three years ago; and 'no man knoweth where he is unto this day.' His father used to live at East Princeton, Mass., but whether there now or not, I cannot say."

GEORGE HENRY BROWNE.

Born at Natick, Mass., October 11, 1857. "Spent the year 1878–79 at Cambridge in a post-graduate course in English, taking degree of A.M. The following year I taught Classics and English in the Keene (N. H.) High School, with outside classes from the city. To secure more time to myself for continuing my work in English, I substituted for school work the more independent arrangement of private pupils.

"In the fall of 1881 I went from Keene to Brooklyn, N. Y., and spent the year in private tutoring. During the summer, at the request of Professor Child, I went back to Cambridge and lookt the ground over with a view to establishing a school for boys. I took a Proctor's room in Felton, and made a small beginning with sons of Professor Child, Professor Norton, and others; and in the fall of 1882, in conjunction with Mr. Edgar H. Nichols ('78), opnd a 'Fitting and Developing School for Boys,' at No. 11 Appian Way.

"In connection with my English Literature classes, which I hav continued in Boston and Cambridge, I hav just publisht my first venture in print, — a small pamphlet entitled 'Notes on Shakspere's Versification, with appendix on the Verse Tests and a Short Descriptiv Bibliografy.' It is usd as a text-book at the College."

WILLIAM HENRY BRUNE.

Born at Baltimore, Md., July 15, 1857. "Joined the Class of 1878 in the middle of the Sophomore year, — that is, in January, 1876.

"After leaving College, taught school for two years with Mr. George G. Carey, of No. 265 N. Eutaw Street, in this city [Baltimore], at the same time attending lectures at the Law School of the University of Maryland, whence I was graduated and received the degree of LL.B. in May, 1880. In the following month I was admitted to the Bar (of Supreme Bench) of Baltimore city, and have since been admitted to practice in the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the U. S. Court for the District of Maryland, becoming a member of the Baltimore Bar Association during the past year (1883).

"In 1880 I wrote an article called 'Time of entering Judgment,' which appeared in the 'Maryland Law Record,' July 30, of that year. Since June, 1883, have been engaged, in addition to strictly professional duties, in assisting Mr. W. T. Brantly, of the Baltimore Bar, in his annotated edition of the Maryland Law and Equity Reports from 1700 to 1851, by preparing the indices therefor.

"My present dwelling is No. 129 St. Paul Street; law office, No. 48 St. Paul Street."

HOWARD MENDENHALL BUCK.

Born at Boston, May 16, 1856. "At the Harvard Medical School for three years. Summer of 1881 was house-officer at the Carney Hospital, Boston. M.D., Harvard, '82. Moved at once to Leipzig, where I spent one year in further study of medicine; since then I have been in Vienna. I have found the original Strohwein which was to be drunk 'am blauen Karpfen' in Cook's German I. There have been no duels here this year, and the only news is that of the possible confinement of the Empress, age 47 to 54 years."

Since Buck wrote the above last spring he has investigated small-pox in England, has been to Norway and as far north as the North Cape to investigate the midnight sun and other curiosities, and has now returned to Boston, where he is practising medicine, with an office at the corner of Clarendon and Newbury Streets.

STEPHEN BULLARD.

Born at Princeton, Mass., August 11, 1855. "After graduation in 1878, I entered the Harvard Law School and spent there a year and a half, leaving at the end of that time on account of illness. In the autumn of 1880 I went to Europe," where he travelled, passing most of the winter in Italy. Was in Rome at the time of the Carnival, which he spoke of in a letter as "calling forcibly to mind the required German of Freshman year." He returned home in the summer of 1882.

"I have since been residing in Boston at 5 Mt. Vernon Street, in winter, and at Lenox in summer."

HERBERT CHANNING BURDETT.

Born at Boston, April 26, 1855. "In October, 1878, I returned to Cambridge and remained at the College during the academic year 1878–79 as a resident graduate, not a candidate for a degree. During a portion of the year I studied law under the direction of a lawyer in Boston; the latter part of the year I devoted to history and to various miscellaneous subjects that I had been unable to take up during my college course. In September, 1879, I went to Claymont, Del., as master of Rev. Dr. Clemson's private school for boys, where I remained till the following June. The summer of 1880 I spent at Weston Military Institute, at Weston, Conn., coaching a few boys in Latin, Greek, and Mathematics. In September, 1880, I assumed the position of Instructor in Mathematics and Drawing at 'Ury House,' a Church school for boys owned by Mrs. J. Crawford at Fox Chase, one of the suburbs of Philadelphia, where I remained one year. In August, 1881, I entered the office of Hartwell & Richardson, Architects, Boston, and have since that time devoted myself to the study of architecture, with the intention of making it my profession.

"I remained with Hartwell & Richardson until October, 1883, when I obtained a position in the studio of Mr. H. H. Richardson, at Brookline, with whom I now am, and expect to remain for an indefinite period."

CHARLES ABERNETHY CATLIN.

Born at New York, May 22, 1857. Is said to be living in Europe.

EUGENE TYLER CHAMBERLAIN.

Born at Albany, N. Y., September 28, 1856. "On graduation I became tutor in Greek, Rhetoric, and Mathematics at the Albany Academy, where I had prepared for College. Remained for one year, and then entered the grain and commission business with my father, Frank Chamberlain. Except for a short time, when I acted as associate editor of the Troy 'Telegram,' remained in business until January, 1882. I then became a member of the local staff of the Albany 'Evening Journal.' Am now associate editor and senate reporter for that paper. I also correspond for the New York 'Tribune,' New York 'Evening Post,' and Boston 'Herald.'

"My permanent address is 270 Hamilton Street, or Albany 'Journal,' Albany, N. Y."

CHARLES FREDERIC CHAMBERLAYNE.

Born at Cambridge, November 30, 1855. "I was at the Harvard Law School after graduation; belonged to the usual number of law clubs (Pow Wow and Ames).

"I was selected to write a Commencement part, and graduated with a cum laude degree in 1881. Was editor of the 'Harvard Daily Echo,' and also wrote for the 'Advertiser' and 'Transcript' (e. g. an article in 'Transcript,' October 23, 1880, signed H. W. X.). I spent the fall of 1881 and spring of 1882 with the firm of Hyde, Dickinson, & Howe, of Boston; was admitted to the Bar in May, 1882.

"In the summer of 1882 I undertook the preparation of a New American edition of 'Best on Evidence.' I spent the fall of 1882 and the spring of 1883 on that work. It was quite a success, being adopted as the text-book for several law schools, including the Harvard one. The publishers are Soule & Bugbee, of Boston.

"In October, 1883, I made a connection with Messrs. Warren & Brandeis of Boston, office 60 and 62 Devonshire Street. I am of course also in business for myself.

"I have developed somewhat of a literary taste, and write occasionally for the papers, doing most of my work on the 'Advertiser,' confining myself to legal topics, reports of celebrated cases, etc. I also write in the various law periodicals, and have been offered permanent positions, which, of course, have been declined."

EDWARD PERKINS CHANNING.

Born at Dorchester, Mass., June 15, 1856. "After leaving College I studied American history at Cambridge and took the degree of Doctor of Philosophy and Master of Arts at Commencement, 1880. Thesis: 'Louisiana Purchase.' I then travelled over a considerable part of Europe, and returned to Cambridge, June, 1881. The next two years were passed in writing book notices and fugitive pieces.

"In May, 1883, I was appointed Instructor in History in Harvard College for the academic year 1883–84, and in November, 1883, the Toppan Prize of $150 was awarded me for an essay on 'Local Government in the English-American Colonies,' by a committee composed of Dr. Charles Deane, Justin Winsor, Esq., and Dr. Herbert B. Adams, of Johns Hopkins University. I am at present engaged upon a chapter for the 'Narrative and Critical History of America,' edited by Justin Winsor, and upon an article for the American Supplement to the Encyclopædia Britannica.

"I was one of the original members of the American Historical Association which was founded at Saratoga in September, 1884, and at that time read my paper on 'Local Government in the English-American Colonies.' In August I gave a lecture on John Harvard, at the Old South. I was elected a Resident Member of the Massachusetts Historical Society, December 11."

GEORGE LOCKE CHENEY.

Born at Providence, R. I., March 9, 1857. "I entered the Harvard Law School in September, 1878, and graduated therefrom in June, 1881, as an LL.B.; having been absent from Cambridge during the middle year, when I taught school at Gibbens & Beach's Fifth Avenue School, in New York, and at the same time served a clerkship in the law office of Sullivan & Cromwell. In October, 1881, I was admitted to the Bar in New York State. From November 1, 1881, to September 1, 1883, I was a clerk in the law office of Stickney & Shepard.

"On October 22, 1883, I opened a law office of my own, at 120 Broadway."

HERBERT MORISON CLARKE.

Born at Niagara Falls, N. Y., July 13, 1855. Entered the Class Senior year. "In September, 1878, I went to Williston Seminary, Easthampton, Mass., as a teacher of Latin and French. At the end of the first term I resigned my position and returned to Cambridge as a candidate for the degree of A.M., which I took in 1879, as well as Highest Final Honors in Classics. At the same time I was made a M.A. of Hobart College, Geneva, N. Y.

"In September, 1879, I assumed the position of Classical Instructor at Trinity School, Tivoli, N. Y. I remained there two years.

"In September, 1881, I returned to Cambridge and registered as a candidate for Ph.D. I have remained there ever since, and have been occupied partly in my own studies, and partly with private pupils. Part of last summer I spent helping Professor Frederic Allen on his revision of Hadley's Greek Grammar. In October, 1882, I was appointed Proctor, and still hold that office. If my Thesis is accepted, I shall receive my degree in the department of Philology in June, 1884. I expect to make teaching my profession."

EDWARD HOWARD COBB.

Born at Abington, Mass., October 13, 1855. "In October, 1878, took the position of teacher of Science and Mathematics at Friend's Academy, New Bedford, Mass. This position I held two years. The next year I was engaged in preparing the sons of Mr. Eugene A. Livingston, of New York, for college. Spent the autumn at Rye Beach; was then at Newport, and afterwards in New York. I taught Science and Mathematics in the Roxbury High School for the school year beginning September, 1881. I was appointed Sub-Master in the Lawrence School, Boston, in September, 1882, and am still there, living at 82 East Newton Street.

"On the 29th of January, 1879, I was married to Miss Mary Adaline Draper at her home in Cambridge. I have a daughter, Ruth Draper Cobb, born December 4, 1883."

CHARLES RICH COMEY.

Born at Foxborough, Mass., July 21, 1856. "Became salesman and manager of a branch house of Comey & Co. (manufacturers of straw goods, at 577 Broadway, New York), at 18 Summer Street, Boston. Am now a salesman with Comey & Co., in New York.

"Married Josephine M. Mead at Cambridge, Mass., June 20, 1883."

OSBORNE SARGENT CURTIS.

Born at Boston, Mass., March 1, 1858. "In the autumn of 1878 I entered as an undergraduate of Trinity College, Cambridge, England; remained three years and a half, and took my B.A. degree in 1881. I am now a student of the Inner Temple, London, and hope to be called to the English Bar.

"My address is Isthmian Club, Grafton Street, London, W."

ARTHUR PERCY CUSHING.

Born at Boston, August 16, 1856. "I joined the Class in the Sophomore year. In the fall of 1878 I studied at Harvard for the degree of A.M., but about Christmas I left and went to Mechanicsville, near Troy, N. Y., and worked for six months in the American Linen Thread Company's mills, learning the trade of flax spinning. I returned to Boston in June, 1879, and entered the Law School in October, 1879. Was appointed Proctor February 9, 1880, and assigned to 7 Stoughton. I was in the Law School till June, 1882, but did not get my degree; however, on June 22, 1882, I was admitted to the Suffolk (Mass.) Bar.

"In October, 1882, I came to Mexico, and have been here since. In the winter of 1882 and 1883 I attended lectures in the Law School here. In the spring of 1883 I entered the office of Sig. Don Luis Mendez, one of the first lawyers in Mexico. I am associated professionally with Mr. Siliceo, a young Mexican lawyer, who has been in the office for some years. I have travelled about the country a good deal, especially in making two journeys from here to Tuxpam, through the mountains, going as the attorney of various parties to take legal possession of certain claims of petroleum wells in that vicinity, and to have them marked out, by cutting an opening through the dense forest surrounding them, which was not very agreeable in the rainy season. I am devoting myself to my profession, and studying Mexican law, with the view of getting admitted to the Mexican Bar in due time. Owing to the large number of Americans and Englishmen here, my practice has been most encouraging, and I may say quite varied and interesting, — very different from that usually had by young lawyers in the good old town of Boston ; and in view of the increase thereof, which will probably take place when the railroads get opened, I think that I did well in coming here, though I abominate the place, and wish that I were at home. Mexico is a curious, interesting place to visit, but not much of a place to stay in.

"I give as my address 170 Newbury Street, my father's house in Boston, which will be one through which I can be reached ; though my present address is Mexican Financier Office, City of Mexico, Mexico ; where you have your servant in your house, as they say in Spanish."

CHARLES DANIELS.

Born at Grafton, Vt., August 11, 1856. In reply to inquiries made in 1881 he wrote, "No good. I am Director, Secretary, and Treasurer of the Mocking-Bird Mill and Mining Company, Mono County, Cal. My address is Bodie, Cal."

Not heard from since 1881.

LOUIS BAILEY DEAN.

Born at Taunton, Mass., September 11, 1857. "In November, 1878, I came to New York to go into the dry goods commission house of James Talcott, of New York. After six months'

'experience' I gave up dry goods and associated myself with George Copeland & Co., cotton merchants, and was with them till recently, when I formed a partnership under the name of Hawley, Dean, & Co., Cotton, at 129 Pearl Street. I have lived in Brooklyn at 50 Remsen Street."

HOWARD FREEMAN DOANE.

Born at Charlestown, Mass., July 20, 1857. "I was tutor in the family of B. F. Butler, Esq., at Scarsdale, N. Y., for two years, and then classical teacher at the 'College Preparatory School,' Poughkeepsie, N. Y. I was teaching until January, 1882. I then spent a year in Idaho on a cattle ranch, on account of my health. Returning East, I found that I could not live there. Came to Kansas in January, 1883. I kept books for a firm in the stone-quarrying business in Florence, Marion County, until May. Then came to Ellsworth, Ellsworth County, and in the autumn invested in sheep, which are doing well to date.

"I did not receive my degree until 1879, owing to a stupid forgetfulness on my part, and a legalized boorishness on the part of 'Allen Danforth, Bursar,' in the matter of the final bill in 1878.

"My permanent address is still Charlestown, Mass."

BENJAMIN HUMPHREY DORR.

Born at Boston, November 24, 1857. "Immediately after leaving College, I went into Warren & Co.'s Steamship Office here, where I remained one year. In December, 1879, I went to Europe, where I stayed five months, returning in May, 1880. Was a gentleman of leisure until July, 1880, when I went into the Allan Steamship Co., where I remained six months. Was a gentleman of leisure again until the 1st of September, 1881, when I became junior member of the firm of Train, Dorr, & Co., dealers in Cordage and Ship Chandlery, at 74 and 76 Commercial Street, Boston, in which concern I now am and expect to be for the rest of my life.

"I was married on the 12th of December, 1882, in Boston, to Julia Manton Washburn."

FRANKLIN ASAPH DUNBAR.

Born at Lexington, Mass., October 10, 1856. "I spent the summer of 1878 in Europe, and entered the Medical School in the fall of that year, where I was for four years. Was one year in the Massachusetts General Hospital.

"I am now practising medicine at No. 36 North Avenue, Cambridge."

* EDWARD SOMERVILLE ELLICOTT.

Born at Jamaica Plain, Mass., January 15, 1857. Died at Jamaica Plain, December 3, 1879. He was the son of Harriet Gordon Parkinson and Joseph Porter Ellicott.

In 1868 he entered Mr. J. P. Hopkinson's school, where he fitted for Harvard College. His life in College was quiet and rather retired. He belonged to the Institute, St. Paul's Society, and the Hasty Pudding Club; was interested in athletics, and was a member of the Athletic Association and his Class Nine. The autumn after his graduation he entered the Medical School, where he continued till his sudden death, from typhoid fever, at his home in Jamaica Plain, December 3, 1879.

It could not but be a benefit to any one to know so good and so unpretentious a man as Ellicott. He was absolutely straightforward. Not only did he never do an underhand thing, but the possibility of acting in any but the most open way seemed never to occur to him. His friendship was as sincere and steady as it was warm. So diffident was he about his own abilities that it may be doubted whether he fully appreciated the real strength of his own character and will; but it is certain that to anything which he had made up his mind he ought to do he could turn an unusual force of steady energy. This was noticeable in the study of his profession; for he was one of those who are unfortunate in having no strong bent to urge them in a particular direction, but have to choose their work rather by expediency than their own desires; yet having once decided upon Medicine, he gave to it an untiring industry, which never flagged to the end of his pure and gentle life.

F. G. A.

At a special Class meeting held in Boston, December 5, these resolutions were adopted: —

"Whereas, we have heard with the deepest regret of the death of our Classmate, EDWARD SOMERVILLE ELLICOTT, one of the most upright and conscientious among us while he was in College, and one who continued true to himself and to his work in his short career afterwards; Be it

"Resolved, That in him we have lost one not only dear to his friends, but a man so pure in character and so steadfast in purpose, that he was an example and a help to all who knew him.

"Resolved, That his faithfulness to his friends and his diligence in the study of the profession which he had chosen reflect honor upon him.

"Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to his family, to whom we offer our heartfelt sympathy."

IRVING ELTING.

Born at Poughkeepsie, May 1, 1856. "I was in the Harvard Law School, graduating in June, 1881, with the degree of LL.B. In October of that year I entered the law office of our first firm here [Poughkeepsie], Thompson, Weeks, & Lown, to pass the year in a clerkship, as is now required for admission to the Bar in New York State. At the September sitting of the General Term of the Supreme Court for this district in Brooklyn, I passed my Bar examination, and was duly sworn in as Attorney and Counsellor. Since that time I have continued to keep my desk with Thompson, Weeks, & Lown, putting out my own 'shingle' and doing what work I have found to do for myself, and doing meanwhile whatever the firm choose to turn over to me. With other work, I have done something in the line of patent business, going to Washington in September, 1883, to argue a claim before the Examiner, successfully as it turned out, and taking the opportunity to learn something of the ways of the Patent Office.

"Soon after my return to Poughkeepsie from Cambridge, I was elected a member of the Literary Section of the Vassar Brothers' Institute; and in March, 1883, at one of the regular public meetings of the Section, I read an essay on Benvenuto Cellini, in whose autobiography I had become interested while in Cambridge. At the annual meeting of the Section in April, 1883, I was elected its Secretary for the year of 1883–84.

"My address is 52 Market Street, Poughkeepsie, N. Y."

PHILIP VAN RENSSELAER ELY.

Born August 23, 1856. "I have really nothing to say.

"My address is Somerset Club, Beacon Street, Boston."

ZEBINA ALLSTON GLEASON.

Born at Westborough, Mass., November 30, 1854. He was in Texas, with his headquarters near Fort Concho, in Tom Green County, following the calling of a surveyor. He left Texas in the spring of 1882, and went to Kiowa, Kansas, where he is interested in cattle, and when last heard from was about to "attend the general round-up."

HENRY GOLDMARK.

Born at New York, N. Y., June 15, 1857. "I left New York, September 1, 1878, for London and Paris, and entered the Royal Polytechnic School at Hanover, Germany, as a regular student, solely on the strength of my Harvard degree. I studied there two full years, but did not take a diploma, though something really equivalent. Afterward I travelled in Germany, England, Holland, and Austria, had a good time, and returned to New York, October, 1880; met Hamilton and Allen (W. E.) at Hanover.

"I was in the employ of the Erie Railway from December 1, 1880, till June 25, 1881, as Draughtsman in the Chief Engineer's office at New York. I then resigned, and accepted a position for three months with the Passaic Rolling Mill Co., Paterson, N. J., which I left September, 1881.

"The winter of 1881–82 I spent in Central Texas, partly in the Chief Engineer's office of the Texas & St. Louis Narrow Gauge Railway Co., at Waco, and later in helping to locate the line of the Road through Coryell and Comanche counties, as far as the Colorado River. Returning to the North in the spring of 1882, I was engaged as General Inspector of Iron Bridge Work, especially erection, on the New York, West Shore, & Buffalo Railway, with headquarters at Albany. I have lately been engaged at the Central Bridge Works, Buffalo, for the Northern Pacific Railway.

"My address is 109 East 71st Street, New York City."

AUGUSTUS COE GURNEE.

Born at Chicago, Ill., March 11, 1855. When he left College he intended to become a "farmer." He has not been heard from since, but was heard of last winter as in Mexico, and last summer as at Mt. Desert, Maine.

His address is 626 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

CHARLES ALBERT HAMILTON.

Born at Medford, Mass., July 9, 1857. "My first year after graduating was spent in Hanover, Germany; the second in teaching at Racine College, Racine, Wis. I was then instructor in the Fitchburg High School, Fitchburg, Mass., for a year. During 1881–82 I taught in Yonkers, N. Y., and read law part of the time in the office of the City Judge. September, 1882, I came to New York City and taught Mathematics and English branches at the Stevens High School, a department of the Stevens Institute, Hoboken, N. J. This present year, 1883–84, I am teaching in the same school and attending the lectures at the Columbia Law School.

"My address is Medford, Mass."

LEWIS HANCOCK.

Born at Austin, Texas, November 17, 1856. "Graduating from College in 1878, I entered the Harvard Law School in the same year, and graduated in 1881 with the degree of LL.B. cum laude. Returning to my home at this place [Austin], I was soon afterwards admitted to practice in the State and Federal Courts; but my health failing somewhat, I spent the summer of 1882 in New Mexico and Arizona.

"January 4, 1883, I was married to Miss Attilia Aldridge Anderson, of this place, and travelled in Europe till the following July. I have one child, a daughter, Louise Hancock, born in Austin, October 5, 1883. I am President of the Texas State Fair Association and a member of the City Council of Austin."

BENJAMIN FOSDICK HARDING.

Born at New York, N. Y., October 27, 1857. "Owing to loss of degree at graduation, I spent 1878–79 in Cambridge, studying for an A.B., an A.M., and Second-Year Honors in Classics, all of which were 'duly received,' — the degree of A.M. being conferred in 1880, — the year 1879–80, however, being devoted to teaching at St. Mark's School, Southborough, Mass. The academic year 1880–81 found me at Concord, N. H., as teacher of Greek in St. Paul's School, under the charge of Dr. H. A. Coit, one of the best classical scholars, as well as among the acknowledged leading churchmen, in the country."

October 8, 1882, he writes: "I am most heartily fond of my profession. The School opens this year with two hundred and seventy boys and about twenty-two masters. My duties consist in teaching Greek daily to seventy-eight boys, and in 'keeping study,' — that is, taking charge, in one room, of one hundred and seventy boys during fourteen hours per week. Besides this regular work, as an outside pastime I correct about four hundred Greek exercises weekly.

> 'When examination papers must be done,
> The instructor's lot is quite a busy one.'

I have written a small pamphlet on 'Greek Conditional Sentences,' which is used in several schools.

"I was married in Boston, June 21, 1881, to Lucy Lambert Williams. George Williams Harding was born at [St. Paul's School] Concord, N. H., July 11, 1882; Louisa Tucker Harding, at Concord, N. H., March 15, 1884."

JOHN BUTTERWORTH HARDING.

Born at Montreal, Canada, April 20, 1851. "After graduating I taught Greek at De Veaux College, Suspension Bridge, N. Y. I remained there a year, when I went to the Berkeley Divinity School, Middletown, Conn., where I studied for three years. For the greater part of that time I was private secretary to Bishop Williams.

"On May 31, 1882, I was made deacon in Middletown, Conn., and on June 6, 1883, was advanced to the priesthood in New Haven, Conn. My work in the ministry has been done in Waterbury, Conn., and Bryn Mawr, Pa. Illness laid me aside till July, 1883, when I began work again as assistant minister in St. John's Church, Troy, N. Y. In May, 1884, I decided to go to Baltimore, having accepted the rectorship of the Church of Our Saviour, corner of Broadway and McElderry Street.

"On January 3, 1884, I was married, in Frederick City, Md., to Anna Mary Trail."

CHARLES HARRINGTON.

Born at Salem, Mass., July 29, 1856. "I graduated from the Harvard Medical School in June, 1881. I was East Medical House-Officer at the Massachusetts General Hospital during the last six months of the course at the Medical School, and received the Boylston Prize for Essay on 'Accidental Arsenic Poisoning' in 1881. I went abroad in August, 1881, and spent three semesters at Leipsic, Strassburg, and Munich, studying Medical Chemistry and Hygiene. Returning, I was appointed Assistant in Chemistry in the Harvard Medical School, June, 1883, and also Milk Analyst for Eastern Massachusetts, under the State Board of Health, Lunacy, and Charity, in October, 1883.

"I was married, February 25, 1884, to Miss M. Josephine Jones, of Boston. My present residence is Monmouth Place, Longwood."

*MELVIN HASBROUCK.

Born at Stone Ridge, Ulster County, N. Y., April 7, 1855. Died at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., March 11, 1879. He was the second son of Matthew and Jane Catherine (Hardenbergh) Hasbrouck.

At the age of fourteen he was sent away to school, but at the end of three months was taken home very sick with inflammatory rheumatism, and was unable to return during that year. The next autumn he went to Riverview Academy, Poughkeepsie, N. Y. After being there only two months he was again obliged to leave school for the same reason as before, thus losing two years of study on account of sickness. In the spring of 1871, because of his delicate health, the family removed to Poughkeepsie in order that he might have better advantages for study, together with home comforts and a mother's care. From this time his health began to improve, and he soon became much better and stronger than he had been for four or five years. It was in Poughkeepsie that he fitted for college,—first at Riverview Academy, and then at Jewett's Military Institute, some of the work of preparation, however, being done out of the school-room, in company with two school-friends who were fitting for College at the same time.

He entered our class at the October examinations in 1874, without conditions, and passed with distinction the papers in Greek and Mathematics. For Mathematics he had an especial fondness and a natural aptitude, which enabled him to take higher rank in the mathematical courses of the Freshman year than in any of his other work. His electives were chosen with a view to the culture and discipline to be obtained from them, and embraced courses in Latin, Greek, French, Political Economy, Fine Arts, and Natural History. So strong was his desire to derive real benefit from his College course that only once did he indulge his fondness for Mathematics, and take an advanced course in that subject; and even his high rank in that elective did not in the least turn him from his purpose to pursue only such studies as would tend most to broaden his scholarship and enlarge his store of useful information.

The study which he seemed to enjoy most of all was Botany, elected by him in our Senior year. Many a time was he seen to return from the Botanical Garden with a brighter look and a more buoyant step, which showed plainly that his hour among plants and flowers had been one of recreation rather than of ordinary college work. This fondness for Botany was with him no passing fancy; it was the outcome of a genuine love for Nature, so deep-rooted as to give rise to the often-expressed desire that he might be able to pass his hours of recreation from a business or a professional life among plants and flowers in a garden of his own.

In college athletics he never took an active part, but none was more ready than he to contribute his share toward the support of Harvard's athletic interests; and certainly Harvard had no son who rejoiced more heartily in all her victories at the bat and at the oar.

He was a member of the Everett Athenæum and the Pi Eta, and in those societies took an active and very successful part in theatricals. At our Class Election he was chosen one of the Class Day Committee, and proved himself a very efficient member.

After graduation he engaged in the carriage-furnishing business, which his older brother had already established in Poughkeepsie. With this work he did not seem quite satisfied, and occasionally he spoke of studying medicine. But while still in business he was taken down with a fever which seemed to baffle the physician's skill, and after only a week's sickness he died suddenly on the morning of March 11, 1879, of meningitis. Although never robust, he had enjoyed such uniformly good health during his College course, with only an occasional slight reminder of his old rheumatic trouble, that even his most intimate friends had no warning to break the suddenness of the shock occasioned by the news of his death.

For his social qualities Melvin Hasbrouck will long live in the memories of the '78 men who knew him best. His hearty good-fellowship, his frank and pleasing manners, made him much sought for as a companion and gained for him many acquaintances. He was content to have a few intimate friends, and only those of us who were fortunate enough to be of that number could fully appreciate his real worth. We could see more than the pleasing exterior, and we knew that the same loyalty of heart which made him so true and enthusiastic a son of his Alma Mater was manifested yet more strongly toward his friends, and most strongly of all in his devoted love for mother and sister, whose every care or trouble he made his own. We who were nearest him realize very deeply our loss; yet it is our privilege to know that his life was thoroughly well worth living, not only in itself, but also because of its ennobling influence.

I. E.

At a special Class meeting held in Boston, March 13, these resolutions were adopted: —

"We, the members of the Class of '78 of Harvard College, sincerely mourn the sudden death of our classmate, Melvin Hasbrouck, as taking from our number one who was not merely a pleasant and genial companion, but a noble-hearted friend, whose generous and thoroughly unselfish nature may well serve us as an inspiration and example.

"To his bereaved family we, as a Class, desire to express our profound sympathy."

EDWARD ROGERS HASTINGS.

Born at South Weymouth, March 14, 1856. "I was clerk with J. & A. Tirrell & Co., leather dealers in Boston, from October, 1878, till recently. I am now out of business, and spent last winter with relatives at the Government Post, San Antonio, Tex.

"South Weymouth, Mass., is as good as any for a permanent address."

HENRY CLINTON HAY.

Born at Portland, Maine, February 19, 1853. "During the summer of 1878 I was clerk at the Glen House, White Mountains, N. H. I spent the following seven months travelling for Messrs. Little, Brown, & Co., Booksellers, Publishers, and Importers, of Boston, going as far south as Florida, and returned to the Glen House for the summer of 1879. In the following November I became a clerk in the Bond Department of the Maverick National Bank, but after six weeks returned to Little, Brown, & Co., and was afterwards with Messrs. Soule & Bugbee, dealers in law books, until December 1, 1882, when I entered the New-Church Theological School, which holds its sessions at 169 Tremont Street, Boston. I expect to finish this course of study in May, 1885."

ANDREW DUFF HEFFERN.

Born at Philadelphia, Pa., February 24, 1856. "I entered Harvard, '78, at the beginning of the Junior year, having previously been in Amherst, '78. I studied theology at the Protestant Episcopal Divinity School, in Philadelphia, in 1878–79, and New Testament Theology with Weiss in Berlin, in 1879–80. Returning, I graduated at the Philadelphia Divinity School in 1881. I was ordained deacon by Bishop Stevens, of Pennsylvania, June 23, 1881; was rector of St. Mary's Church, Hillsborough, Ohio, from July 1, 1881, to April 1, 1882, and advanced to the priesthood in Cincinnati, by Bishop Peterkin, of West Virginia, February 26, 1882. I became rector of Trinity Church, Southwark, Philadelphia, April 1, 1882.

"My address is 209 Catherine Street, Philadelphia."

PARKE WOODBURY HEWINS.

Born at Lawrence, Mass., May 19, 1855. "I passed three years at the Harvard Medical School. During the latter part of my course I was assistant to Dr. Dunn, in his office, No. 60

Chambers Street. I was also assistant to Dr. J. G. Blake until June 20, 1882, six months of which time I was a house-officer at the Boston City Hospital. I left the Hospital December, 1882; practised medicine six months in Boston; associated myself with Dr. J. G. Blake again May 17, 1883, and remained with him till October, when I came to Dubuque, Iowa, where I am now a member of the firm of Dr. G. M. Staples & Son. Dr. Staples is the leading surgeon of the Northwest.

"I have no important events or items of interest to communicate; my life is a smooth sea of monotony. I find wealth accumulates as slowly here as in New England."

JOHN RUSSELL HOLMES.

Born at Cincinnati, Ohio, September 4, 1856. "I took one term, 1878–79, in the Cincinnati Law School, and one, 1879–80, in the Harvard Law School. I was admitted to the Ohio Bar by examination before the Ohio Supreme Court, October 6, 1880, and was afterward with S. N. Maxwell, Esq. I am now junior member of the firm of Huston & Holmes, Attorneys, No. 5 West Fourth Street, Cincinnati, Ohio."

JOHN HOMANS.

Born at Boston, March 15, 1857. "Since graduation I have received my degree of A.B. as of 1878, given me in 1879." He was three years in the Harvard Medical School, and a year house-officer in the Massachusetts General Hospital, receiving his degree of M.D. in 1882. In the summer of 1882 he went to Europe, where he has travelled, and studied in Vienna and elsewhere till the past summer, when he returned to Boston and opened an office on Boylston Street.

CHARLES WELLS HUBBARD.

Born at Newton, Mass., February 24, 1856. "Directly after Class Day I sailed for Europe, and spent three months abroad, most of the time tramping in Switzerland with Wheeler, Slade, Sturgis, and P. Tuckerman, of '78. I returned to Boston in October, and went into the office of the Ludlow Manufacturing Company, but worked most of the winter in inventing and taking out a patent for an electric annunciator, to the detriment of my head and eyes. From April to May I was employed in taking down and setting up machinery, in moving from East Braintree to Ludlow; then went back to work at the Boston office.

"In January I was obliged to give up work on account of trouble with my head and eyes, and made a trip to California and back, both ways by Panama. I also made a winter trip into the Yosemite Valley, described in a letter to the Boston 'Evening Transcript,' and travelled in Southern California. I returned home in May, and in a few days sailed for Europe with my family. I travelled in England, Belgium, Holland, Germany, Switzerland, and the Tyrol; saw the Passion Play, Vienna, Dresden, Paris, Nice, Pau, Genoa, Rome, Naples, Florence, and Venice. I returned to Boston in the spring of 1881, and since then have done nothing particular, though still connected with the Ludlow Manufacturing Company.

"My address is 284 Devonshire Street, Boston."

EDWARD BROWN HUNT.

Born at South Sudbury, February 19, 1855. "Directly after graduation I went to teaching in a small Church-school (the Eaglenest School) in Newburyport, Mass., conducted by Dr. L. W. Hixon. I remained there three years, until the Doctor gave up his school. The next year I had a private pupil in Williamsport, Pa., a Mr. Walker, whom I fitted for the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, at Troy, N. Y. After entering him successfully, I was offered the position of secretary by his father, Hon. R. J. C. Walker, with whom I passed the winter of 1882–83 in Washington. I returned to Boston in March, 1883, and soon secured a position on the catalogue in the Public Library."

ERNEST JACKSON.

Born at Boston, October 13, 1857. "The year after graduating I spent in Cambridge, where I took an A.M., with Final Honors in Classics, and served as Proctor for part of the year. The two following years I taught as assistant at Mr. William Nichols's school, 34 Essex Street, Boston, where I taught everything I knew and many things I did n't know. I left my former place to teach at Mr. Hopkinson's school for a higher salary. I remained there for two months, and since then have had a continuous stream of private pupils, — as many as thirteen, in the summer of 1883. My spare time in the afternoons, when I have any, is spent in helping register the collections of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts.

"In 1879 I joined the Archæological Institute of America, of which I am still a member."

LAWRENCE JACOB.

Born at New York, February 9, 1857. "I entered the Class of '78 at the regular examination in the fall of 1874, but did not join the Class until the beginning of the Sophomore year. After graduating I came here to Texas, to take, with a younger brother, joint management of a sheep ranch. During four months, beginning with October 15, 1880, I went to Europe, visiting many places of interest in France, Germany, Switzerland, Italy, and Algeria.

"My address is, and always has been, Campbellton, Atascosa Co., Texas, and I shall always be glad to welcome any of my classmates who may drift into this corner of the Union."

BENJAMIN NEWHALL JOHNSON.

Born at Lynn, Mass., June 19, 1856. "After graduating from Harvard, I attended the lectures of the Law School of Boston University, two years, at the same time studying in the office of Ives, Lincoln, & Huntress, Boston. I have been practising law in the Equitable Building since March 31, 1880, on which day I was admitted to the Bar.

"I was married, June 15, 1881, to Ida Moore Oliver. Have since then resided at Lynn. Have one child, a boy, born at Lynn, May 6, 1883, — name, Romilly Johnson."

EDWARD FRANCIS JOHNSON.

Born at Woburn, Mass., October 22, 1856. "During the summer and fall of 1878, and the succeeding winter, I was enlisted as a disciple of Blackstone. I soon grew weary, however, of reading law by myself; and April 20, 1879, sailed for Europe. I went almost directly to Germany, and remained at Kleinfahner, a small village near Gotha, recreating and studying German, until the first of August. In company with a friend, I then took a pleasure trip through Germany, Switzerland, France, and England, returning home about the middle of October. I immediately entered the Harvard Law School and remained there two years. In the summer of 1881, Bancroft of our Class and myself took an office together in Pemberton Square, Boston, and, after a summer's grind, were both admitted members of the Suffolk Bar in November. In June, 1882, I returned to Cambridge and took the final examinations at the Law School and secured an LL.B. On July 3 I became clerk of the Fourth District Court of Eastern Middlesex, a local common-law court of limited jurisdiction holding its sessions at Woburn. I have held this office and continued the practice of my profession at Woburn and Boston since that date, giving up my office with Bancroft, however, in October, 1883, and thereafter confining my business solely to Woburn.

"On September 26, 1882, I was married to Mary Elizabeth Simonds, of Woburn, at Woburn, where I have since resided. On November 10, 1883, Mrs. Johnson gave birth to a son, who has received the name of Harold Pendexter Johnson."

JOSEPH FRENCH JOHNSON.

Born at Hardwick, Mass., August 24, 1853. "I joined '78 in 1876, remaining till graduation. I previously entered College as Sophomore, joining '77 in 1874, and staying in that class one year, then studying a year at Halle an der Saale, in Prussia.

"I taught Latin and Greek in the Harvard School for Boys at Chicago (Masters, J. J. Schobinger and John C. Grant) from 1878 till 1881; travelled in Europe with a pupil from June till December of 1881, and began to work for the Springfield 'Republican' on Christmas of the same year. I edited the 'New England News' for eighteen months, till June of 1883; I reported from June till September, when I was promoted to the city editorship.

"My most glorious achievement since leaving College was the organization of a boat club at my home, Aurora, Ill., in the summer of 1879. The Club elected me captain, spent $2,000 on a boat-house and four-oared gig, never won a race, and died before it was a year old."

ARTHUR MASON JONES.

Born at Newport, R. I., June 22, 1854. "After graduating I went in the fall of 1878 to Texas; stayed there a year, getting an insight into the cattle business, and from there went to Wyoming, where I started a ranch with a small herd of cattle. I remained there three years, when, owing to a death in the family, I returned home, closing out my interests in the West. I am at present engaged in the real estate business at No. 25 Pine Street, New York.

"I was married, May 3, 1884, to Miss Cornelia Waldo, of New Brighton, Staten Island."

WALTER KESSLER.

Born at Madison, Ind., January 4, 1856. "I read law with Harrison, Hines, & Miller, from October 1, 1878, to December 1, 1880; was then admitted to the Bar, and commenced practising, being connected with the firm of Henrichs & Kessler, 15 Fletcher & Sharpe's Block." He then went to Helena, Montana, and in the summer of 1881 made a trip to the National Park in company with Brevet Major John F. Weston, U.S.A., and others, since when he has not been heard from.

His address is Massachusetts Avenue, Indianapolis, Ind.

PHILIP COOMBS KNAPP.

Born at Lynn, Mass., June 3, 1858. "Immediately after graduation I entered the Harvard Medical School, where I remained four years. After leaving the school I received an appointment as house-officer at the Boston City Hospital, where I remained until January 7, 1884 (a year and a half). On leaving the City Hospital I was appointed house-officer at the Lunatic Hospital, South Boston, to remain six months. I am now practising, and have an office at 51 Hancock Street, Boston.

"In June, 1883, I received the degrees of A.M. and M.D. at Harvard. In the fall of 1881 I became a member of the Massachusetts Medical Society. In the winter of 1881–82 I was elected a member of the Council of the Dante Society, on its organization, which position I have held ever since. The only thing I have written worthy of note is an article on 'Dante in America' for the supplementary volume of the Encyclopædia Britannica, not yet published."

*NATHAN RYNO SMITH LANIER.

Born at Baltimore, November 18, 1856. Died at Baltimore, December 29, 1881. He was the son of Sterling Edmund and Mary Hillhouse (Smith) Lanier.

The following brief memoir was written by his mother:—

"Nathan Ryno Smith Lanier, son of Captain Lanier, U.S.N., and grandson of Professor N. R. Smith, of Baltimore, was born at Baltimore, November 18, 1856. He was educated by Dr. Robert Atkinson, entered Harvard College in 1874, and graduated in 1878. On account of delicate health he went abroad in the fall of the same year, spending the winter in Egypt. He returned to Baltimore in May, 1881; but his health not being restored he gradually failed, and died on December 29, 1881."

The following is from the Baltimore "Sun:" —

"Dr. Nathan R. S. Lanier, aged twenty-five years, died yesterday at No. 89 Saratoga Street, of consumption, after a sickness of some duration. Dr. Lanier was born in Baltimore, graduated at Harvard with high honors, and afterwards at the School of Medicine of the University of Maryland. He was a young man of unusual literary attainments, learned in his profession, and of great promise. He was a grandson of the late Professor Nathan R. Smith, and a nephew of Professor Alan P. Smith. For some time he was associated in practice with Professor Alan P. Smith, but was compelled to go abroad on account of ill-health. He visited Egypt, Italy, and various parts of the Mediterranean Sea, and came home apparently improved by his trip, but the improvement did not last. Dr. Lanier never married. Few young men in Baltimore could be regretted more than the deceased."

ROSEWELL BIGELOW LAWRENCE.

Born at Medford, January 31, 1854. "I took the three-year course at the Harvard Law School, graduating in June, 1881. Was admitted to the Suffolk Bar, January 30, 1882. My office is 23 Court Street, Room 30. Residence and permanent address, Medford."

JOHN CLARENCE LEE.

Born at South Woodstock, Vt., October 15, 1856. "I was graduated, with the degree of B.A., at St. Lawrence University in 1876. I joined the Class of 1878 at Harvard at the beginning of the Senior year, and was graduated with the Class; received the degree of M.A. at St. Lawrence University in 1879. I entered the Theological School of St. Lawrence University (Canton, N. Y.) in September, 1878, and studied there two years; then became pastor of the First Universalist Church of Perry, N. Y., July 4, 1880. My work was interrupted by sickness and convalescence from October 8, 1880, till February 17, 1881. I then returned to work, and was ordained to the ministry of Christ in the Universalist Church, and installed February 22, 1881.

"I resigned the pastorate there April 1, 1883, and became pastor of the First Universalist Church of St. Albans, Vt., May 1, 1883, being installed as such August 23, 1883. I am still in this connection."

LUCIUS NATHAN LITTAUER.

Born at Gloversville, N. Y., January 20, 1859. "After graduation I entered at once my father's business, — the manufacture of kid and buck gloves (the mills being at Gloversville, N. Y.). After devoting myself for four years to its different branches, in January, 1883, my father transferred the business to my brother and myself. We formed the firm of Littauer Brothers, with an office at 450 Broadway, New York.

"What reading I have found time to do has been in the vein of Finance, Political Economy, and History. I have taken an interest in politics, and am an officer of our district organization. I was a delegate to the Chicago Republican Convention in 1884.

"I am still thoroughly interested in the yearly work of our crew and foot-ball team, and have occasionally lent them what aid I could in looking after their interests."

WARREN PLIMPTON LOMBARD.

Born at West Newton, Mass., May 29, 1855. "I studied medicine for three years at the Harvard Medical School. After receiving my degree, I served one term at the Boston Lying-in Hospital, and took some courses at the Bellevue Hospital College in New York. Travelled and studied in Europe till March, 1883, when I returned to America and married Miss Caroline Cook, of New York, at New Brighton, Staten Island, June 21. In August I sailed with my wife for Europe, and after two months of travel settled in Leipzig, to continue my work in the Physiological Laboratory of the Leipzig University, under Professor Ludwig."

AUGUSTUS PEABODY LORING.

Born at Boston, September 7, 1856. "I will be much obliged to you if you will kindly drop me from your record, as I feel well assured a very accurate record of my proceedings is being kept — well, we can't always tell exactly where; but at any rate I will not trouble you to run in opposition."

In answer to inquiries in 1884, he wrote, "I have met with no accidents of the kind specified;" though the Secretary understands that since writing this he has had an accident that came in the form of getting married.

His address is 11 Pemberton Square, Boston, Mass.

CLINTON WILLIAM LUCAS.

Born at Milford, N. H., May 13, 1857. "I studied law, and was admitted to the Suffolk Bar (Mass.) in 1881. I spent one year in Connecticut, and there held the office of Commissioner of the Superior Court; was in practice in Boston about a year, from 1882. In 1883 I was teaching in Xenia, Ohio; am at present in Philadelphia, preparing two young men for Harvard. I intend soon to resume my profession, but not in Boston.

"I give my address as at Cambridge, which will be safer."

FREDERICK LUTZ.

Born at Uehlingen, Germany, February 26, 1850. "I joined our Class in the Senior year, and since graduation have been, and am still, teaching German as tutor at Harvard. I received the degree of A.M. in 1879 from Baldwin University, Berea, Ohio. I have written a little book, called 'German Derivatives,' and am preparing an Etymological Lexicon. This last will be entirely different from anything that I have seen. It will resemble in plan somewhat that of Curtius or Fick. Many of the Teutonic languages will be compared with the German; also, where possible, the Romance and Oriental (that is, where there is an apparent resemblance).

"My address is Holworthy 3; the room which Professor Sophocles had."

HENRY BURDEN McDOWELL.

Born at San Antonio, Texas, April 29, 1857. The Secretary of 1877 said of him in 1880: —

"He writes: 'I have been in California two years since entering College in 1873; finished my College course in 1878. I have spent most of my time out of College in writing for the press; at present I am studying at the Harvard Law School.'"

ROBERT DEAN McFADON.

Born at Quincy, Ill., December 5, 1857. "I entered the Harvard Law School in September, 1879, and remained there for two years. I was married, June 29 [probably 1881], in Vergennes, Vt., to Rose W. Woodbridge. After my marriage I entered upon the practice of law in Chicago, Ill., and have since resided there. Have one child, a girl, born February 22, 1883. My address is 183 Rush Street."

HARRY WHITE MASON.

Born at Newton Centre, May 20, 1857. "I was at Cambridge at the Harvard Law School, studying law for three years, with the exception of a six months' trip to California as Secretary of the United States Fish Commission. I am now practising law at 19 Milk Street, Boston, making a specialty of conveyancing."

JULIAN AUGUSTUS MEAD.

Born at West Acton, Mass., April 15, 1856. "In 1881 I graduated from the Harvard Medical School. In the summer of 1881 I went to Europe, and remained there until the fall of 1883. I continued my medical studies in Vienna, Leipsic, and Paris.

"I began the practice of medicine in Watertown, Mass., in November, 1883. In October, 1883, I was admitted to the Massachusetts Medical Society, and in March, 1884, was appointed Medical Examiner for the Seventh District of Middlesex County. In March, 1884, I was appointed Assistant-Surgeon of the Fifth Infantry, M.V.M."

JAMES WATTS MERCUR.

Born at Towanda, Pa., December 3, 1856. "Immediately upon graduation I entered the law office of my brother, Rodney A. Mercur, Towanda, Pa., and was admitted to the Bar of Bradford County, December 2, 1879. I then came to Philadelphia, and was admitted about the middle of December, 1879. I have practised law ever since, and with fair success, — first in the office of Joseph B. Townsend, where I remained till October, 1882, when I opened an office at my present address, 715 Walnut Street.

"I was married, March 1, 1881, by Bishop Stevens, Rev. Nelson McVickar assisting, to Marietta Elizabeth Honoré Denis, of Philadelphia, and travelled in Europe during the summer of 1881. I have a daughter, Marie Denis Mercur, born January 11, 1882."

WILLIAM STARR MILLER.

Born at New York, October 26, 1856. "I graduated at the Columbia Law School, and was admitted to the Bar in 1880.

"My address is 39 Fifth Avenue, New York."

OGDEN MILLS.

Born at Sacramento, Cal., December 18, 1856. No report. He is said to be in business in New York.

Was married to a Miss Livingston, at New York, in April, 1882.

HENRY WATMOUGH MONTAGUE.

Born at Dedham, Mass., July 9, 1856. "I studied law in a desultory manner till January 1, 1881, as being the most natural way of making the transition from a man of leisure to a man of affairs; and in 1879–80 I spent six months on a sheep ranch in West Virginia, at White Sulphur Springs.

"Three years ago I entered the service of the Merchants' Despatch Transportation Co., — a fast freight line, — and have remained with them in Boston ever since. Their office is at 221 Washington Street, Boston."

CHARLES MOORE.

Born at Ypsilanti, Mich., October 20, 1855. "I edited the Ypsilanti (Mich.) 'Commercial' from August 1, 1878, to March 1, 1880; also the Detroit 'Every Saturday' from March 1, 1880, till December 1, 1883. I began to edit the Detroit 'Morning Times,' December 1, 1883.

"I was married at Middleton, Mass., June 27, 1878, to Alice Williams Merriam, of Middleton. McAllaster Merriam Moore was born in Detroit, March 15, 1881."

EDWARD COOK MOORE.

Born at Brooklyn, N. Y., July 3, 1856. "After graduation I entered the law office of Messrs. Weekes & Forster, and at the same time the Columbia College Law School, where I took my degree in May, 1880, being in the same month admitted to the Bar of the State of New York. Since that time I have practised my profession.

"My address is Yonkers, N. Y."

JOHN HOLMES MORISON.

Born at Baltimore, Md., January 21, 1856. "I was in Europe from Commencement, 1878, till the autumn of 1879. I was in the Harvard Law School during 1879–80, and was studying law in the office of George H. Williams, A.B. (Harvard), 1880–81. Entered the Bar of Baltimore city, September, 1881. Since September 1, 1881, I have been practising law, with my office at 56 St. Paul Street, Baltimore. In October, 1883, I wrote an article entitled 'Virginia Bonds,' which was published as an editorial of the 'Post' and of the New York 'Nation.'"

EDWIN WILSON MORSE.

Born at Natick, Mass., March 29, 1855. "I went on the 'Tribune,' September, 1878, and was there, first as reporter and then as a member of the editorial staff, until October, 1883, when I accepted the position of New York editorial correspondent of the Boston 'Transcript,' a position which I now hold. I still, however, retain a connection with the 'Tribune,' for which I write somewhat.

"On September 14, 1881, I was married, in Springfield, Mass., to Florence L. Stone, of Manchester, N. H.

"My home address is No. 122 East 52d Street, New York City."

HERBERT FLOYD WILLIS MORSE.

Born at Livermore Falls, Maine, May 30, 1857. "I have held the position of Assistant Principal of Hebron Academy, at Hebron, Maine, nearly all the time since graduation. The Academy is a Baptist institution, and prepares students especially for Colby University, at Waterville, Maine."

Not heard from since 1881.

JOHN ARCHIBALD MURRAY.

Born at Ottawa, Ill., November 19, 1857. "I was at the Columbia College Law School, and graduated in May, 1881, with degree of LL.B., and was admitted by the General Term of the Supreme Court of the State of New York, as attorney and counsellor-at-law, in June of the same year. I am still practising law.

"My address is 238 West 52d Street, New York."

GEORGE WILLIAM NASH.

Born at East Boston, Mass., July 19, 1856. "As soon as I left College I went to work for the Singer Manufacturing Company as collector, and stayed with them two years. In the fall of 1880 I left them and commenced medical studies. I studied medicine in the Harvard Medical School, Boston, passed all examinations, and was entitled to my degree at the Commencement of 1883; but, intending to try an examination for a position in one of our Boston hospitals, I did not take my degree, according to the regulations governing applicants for the hospital position. As I was travelling with an invalid in the fall, I was unable to take the proposed examination, and so am still travelling.

"My address is 23 Trowbridge Street, Cambridge, Mass."

HENRY SYLVESTER NASH.

Born at Newark, Ohio, December 23, 1854. "I was in the Class only three years, joining it as a 'Fresh Sophomore,' in 1875. I entered the Episcopal Theological School of Cambridge in 1878, studied there a year, taught school at De Veaux College, New York, 1879–80, when I returned to the School, and graduated in 1881. I was then ordained, and took charge of a Mission Church in Waltham, where I have since held on. In 1882 I was appointed Instructor in the Episcopal Theological School of Cambridge, and in 1883 was appointed Professor of the Literature and Interpretation of the New Testament, which chair I now 'rattle around in.'

"I was married, June 26, 1883, at Waltham, to Bessie Kiefler Curtis.

"A letter to Cambridge would always reach me."

SAMUEL NEWELL NELSON.

Born at Milford, Mass., May 19, 1856. "I was at the Harvard Medical School, and received the degree of M.D. in 1882. Entered the Massachusetts Medical Society in 1881, and have practised medicine in Cambridge (690 Main Street) since then (having the first year the certificate that I had fulfilled the requirements for my degree, which I did not receive till 1882). I am now taking a special course at the Medical School for the degree of A.M., for which I intend to apply next June (1884). My inaugural thesis at the Medical School was upon 'Plastic Splints in Surgery,' and was published in the 'Annals of Anatomy and Surgery,' April, 1882, Brooklyn, N. Y. Also a paper on 'The Obstetric Forceps,' read before the Boston Gynæcological Society, is published in the 'New England Medical Monthly,' Sandy Hook, Conn., for February, 1884. Next summer I intend to go to Germany for two years.

"You can always reach me through Milford, Mass."

EDGAR HAMILTON NICHOLS.

Born at Saco, Maine, December 7, 1856. "I spent the first two years in tutoring in the family of Mrs. March, at Staatsburgh-on-Hudson, N. Y. I then returned to Cambridge to study for a Ph.D. in Mathematics." He has been teaching in Cambridge.

Was married, June 23, 1884, at Portland, Maine, to Julia Webster Abbot.

WILLIAM JOHN OLIVER.

Born at Belfast, Ireland, July 4, 1855. "After leaving College I entered Union Theological Seminary in New York City, in the fall of 1878, and graduated in regular course in 1881. I then took a post-graduate course of one year in the same institution, and in the spring of 1882 accepted an invitation from the Presbyterian Church of Aurora, Neb., to act as their pastor. I arrived here [Aurora] in June of that year and am still here."

HENRY BLANCHARD OSGOOD.

Born at San Francisco, Cal., March 9, 1857. "I passed the two years after graduation in Europe, being fifteen months of the time at the Royal Saxon School of Mines in Freiberg. I then engaged in the study and practice of metallurgy at the Metallurgical Laboratory of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Boston, Mass. September 27, 1882, I left home for San Francisco; was some three weeks on the way out, during which I spent considerable time at Denver, Leadville, and other places in Colorado, visiting the smelters and mines. I rather liked Colorado, and think I should like to live in Denver, in case I had to live in Colorado. For a year, while I looked after my father's interests in California, I gave my eyes a good rest from fire work. In the autumn of 1883 I returned to Boston, and am now (and shall be for the next year) busy looking after my father's private business.

"My address is 2 Guild Street, Roxbury, Mass."

WILLIAM SIGOURNEY OTIS.

Born at Nahant, Mass., July 3, 1857. "I studied law in the office of Messrs. Tuckerman, Huntington, & Fitz, at Salem, and entered the Harvard Law School, October 1, 1879. I was admitted to the Suffolk Bar, June 22, 1882; appointed Notary Public, October 26, 1882; appointed Commissioner of the Court of Alabama Claims, January 16, 1883.

"My address is 139 Beacon Street, Boston."

HENRY DEELEY PAGE.

Born at Boston, March 6, 1857. He was for some months in the Assabet Woollen Mills at Maynard, Mass. In April, 1879, he engaged in the wool business, in the employ of Harding, Martin, & Co., Boston, Mass. He left the wool business in the winter of 1883, and entered the employ of J. A. & W. Bird & Co., 119 Milk Street, who do a business in dyestuffs, etc., with which firm he still is, and in whose interests he has twice been to Europe.

His address is 1940 Washington Street, Boston.

JAMES PARKER.

Born at Boston, February 28, 1856. "I worked from Christmas, 1879, to October, 1880, at N. P. Hamlen's, commission merchant, 19 Central Street.

"My address is Somerset Club, Boston."

ROBERT FLETCHER PATTERSON.

Born at Stoyestown, Pa., November 26, 1854. "I entered Harvard with the Class in 1874, and graduated with the Class in 1878, doing the Junior year's work at home. I began studying law in 1878 at Somerset, Pa. (our county seat), and was admitted to the Bar in 1880. The same year I ran on the Democratic ticket for the office of representative for this county to the State Legislature; but the county being Republican, I did n't 'get there.' Practised law at Somerset for two years; and in the fall of 1882 went to Des Moines, Iowa. There I did various things besides the law, for 'bread and butter,' and in April, 1883, went into the 'newspaper business,' on the editorial staff of the 'Iowa State Register' at Des Moines, remaining till September, when I went to Chicago. I there worked for a time as reporter on the 'Times' and the 'Herald;' then left Chicago and came home (Stoyestown, Pa.) at Christmas. I am not yet settled in 'business;' am not yet married; have not yet any children. Outwardly all is still unsettled; inwardly all is serene."

In July, 1884, he writes: "I have just been elected Professor of Greek and Latin in the Pittsburg High School."

DANIEL EDWARD PAULLIN.

Born at Quincy, Ill., January 15, 1856. It seems best that Paullin's record should stop. Any one wishing to hear of him may inquire of the Secretary.

GEORGE HALSEY PERLEY.

Born at Lebanon, N. H., September 12, 1857. "I have been and am in the lumber manufacturing business at Ottawa, Canada, as manager for Perley & Pattee, of which firm my father is senior partner.

"I was married, June 4, 1884, to Miss Annie Bowlby."

EDWARD EMERSON PHILLIPS.

Born at Eaton, Ohio, December 30, 1850. Not heard from.

WILLIAM MAGRUDER PHILLIPS.

Born at Leavenworth, Kansas, November 9, 1859. "I will answer as many of the scheduled questions as I can, explaining, however, in regard to the inquiry as to articles written, that it would fill a dozen pages of closely written foolscap to enumerate one portion of them. I may say, however, that of those copied into papers throughout the country a few are as follows: 'Interview with Millie-Christine in five languages;' 'Spiritualism according to Colonel Isaac Eaton, of the National Democratic Committee, with descriptions of private pictures;' 'Interview with Rossi, the tragedian;' and a series of sporting articles copied from the Chicago 'Daily News' last winter. I could mention more, but do not want to seem to indulge in self-praise. To give you a brief account of myself since I graduated, I will write as follows, hoping it will prove what you desire: —

"Until June, 1879, I was Principal of the Preparatory High School at Leavenworth, Kansas. Tiring of this, and meditating pursuit of law as a profession, I entered a law office and read for three months. Then I entered the St. Louis Law School. I remained there for three months, when the confinement began to tell on me, and I secured a position as Professor of Mathematics and Classics at Abion College, Troy, Tenn. January 27, 1880, just prior to my trip to Tennessee, I married Clara A. Hamilton, of St. Louis. I remained in Troy, Tenn., five months. Tiring of country life, for it was but little else, I returned to St. Louis. There I remained three months, and was engaged as Principal of the High School at Centralia, Ill. January 20, 1881, a daughter was born to me in Centralia, Ill. She was named Julia May Phillips, and is still living. In June, 1881, I became editor of the Centralia 'Sentinel.' After holding that position, an unfortunate split necessitated my retirement. Returning again to St. Louis, I became a reporter on the St. Louis 'Evening Chronicle.' There I remained until December, 1881, when I was made dramatic critic and court reporter of the St. Louis 'Daily News.' On the demise of that paper after a short existence of three months, I came to Chicago, March 27, 1882. April 16, 1882, I secured a position on the Chicago 'Herald,' having meanwhile refused an offer as telegraph editor of the Minneapolis 'Tribune.' July 19, 1882, I transferred my allegiance to the Chicago 'Daily News.' There I was a reporter for nine days, when I became assistant telegraph editor. July 19, 1883, I was promoted to the position of head telegraph editor of the 'News,' and that position I hold at present and expect to hold for some time to come, at least until I am called to fill a higher place.

"Thus you see I have transferred my allegiance from pedagogy to law, thence back to pedagogy, and finally to journalism, where, as I possess more or less of the requirements necessary to success, I think I shall remain."

Mr. C. Moore writes from Detroit that "W. M. Phillips, '78, is a member of the 'Times' staff, having left the Chicago 'Daily News' to accept a position with us." From this we must infer that Phillips is now in the "higher place" that he was waiting to be "called to."

JOHN PICKERING.

Born at Salem, Mass., May 24, 1857. "For two or three years after leaving College I had no regular occupation, and travelled somewhat in the West and South. For the last two years I have been a clerk in the firm of John Pickering & Mosely, stock-brokers, 40 State Street, Boston."

GEORGE MILLER PINNEY.

Born at Windsor, Wis., March 8, 1856. From Mr. Moses King's "Harvard Register," of February, 1880: —

"George Miller Pinney, Jr. (1878), has resigned his position at De Veaux College, and has returned to Cambridge to prepare a young man for Harvard College, and also to get himself ready for the June examinations of the first-year class at the Harvard Law School."

From Pinney: "Office of Evarts, Southmayd, & Choate, No. 52 Wall Street, New York."

WILLIAM HENRY POTTER.

Born at Boston, June 20, 1856. "In the fall of 1878 I entered the Harvard Medical School and remained there two years, at the close of which time I travelled abroad for a short period. On my return I entered into the employ of the firm of Silas Potter & Co., of Boston, and remained with them till February, 1884. In February, 1884, I entered the Harvard Dental School, where I am now studying.

"My address is 40 Perrin Street (Roxbury Station), Boston, Mass."

ROBERT JOHNSTON HARE POWEL.

Born at Newport, R. I., May 4, 1855. "Profession, 'the law.' Central Office, 708 Walnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

"N.B. The Branch offices do not yet exist."

GEORGE HYDE PRESTON.

Born at Lockport, Ill., November 8, 1856. "I spent two years, after I graduated, at the St. Louis Law School, receiving the degree of LL.B. in 1880. I was soon after admitted to the Bar in Missouri. The following fall I went to New York and entered the law office of Root & Martin, 83 Cedar Street, where I remained as their clerk till May, 1882. I then left the office, taking a trip in Oregon and British Columbia. On my return to New York in September, I began practice for myself, having desk-room in the office of Root & Martin. The next February (1883) I left New York for Portland, Oregon, and after a short stay there came to Seattle, Washington Territory, where I have since been. I am at present operating a saw-mill. I like the country very much, and see a bright future for it."

GEORGE SHARP RAYMER.

Born at New York, October 13, 1855. "I went to the Columbia School of Mines, New York City, three years, and graduated in 1881 as E. M. (Engineer of Mines). I remained in New York till January, 1882, then came to Colorado; have been here ever since, in charge of a mine at Idaho Springs, Clear Creek County."

*EDWARD PRESCOTT REED.

Born at Stow, Mass., October 12, 1854. Died at Asheville, N. C., August 3, 1882.

"I was born in Stow, Mass., October 12, 1854. My father, Prescott Reed, was born in Acton, Mass., February 14, 1821, a descendant in the seventh generation from an ancestor who came to Massachusetts from England in 1635 (which fact, with others of like import, may be found in the 'History of the Reed Family,' by Jacob W. Reed, published in Boston, 1861). In 1850, two years after his marriage, he removed to a farm which he had purchased in Stow, and on which he resided at the time of his death, March 9, 1873. He was a shrewd business man, self-made, upright and honest, and of great energy; one of that class whose worth as pioneers is seldom duly recognized, he having furnished the means by which alone his children could secure their advancement.

"My mother, Hannah Eliza Derby, born in Weston, Mass., February 8, 1823, was connected with the Derbys of Salem; from her I derive many characteristics.

"I passed my life in Stow on my father's farm and in attending common school; I also attended Lawrence Academy, Groton, Mass., fall term, 1867; Appleton Academy, New Ipswich, N. H., in the following autumn; and Norwich Academy, Conn., in the autumn and winter of 1869–70.

"I fitted for College at Phillips Exeter Academy, N. H., entering the middle class in the autumn of 1872 (having attended Stow High School in 1871), being absent the spring term of 1873, and graduating with the class of 1874. On account of a slight hemorrhage from throat or lungs just before the beginning of the College year, 1877–78, physicians strongly advised me to leave College and New England for the winter, if possible, which I did, travelling in Colorado and California, and returning to Cambridge, May 1, 1878, with improved health, and some impressions of Western life. I received notification while absent of my election to the Phi Beta Kappa."

The foregoing is what our classmate Reed wrote of himself in the Class Book in our Senior year; the following sketch of his life was prepared by his mother, at the request of Patterson, of our Class: —

"Edward Prescott Reed was born in Stow, Middlesex Co., Mass., October 12, 1854, of English ancestry, who were among the earlier Puritan emigrants. William Reade, — as the name was formerly spelled, — the paternal ancestor, settled at Dorchester, Mass., October, 1635, and Roger Derby, the maternal ancestor, at Salem, Mass., in 1634;

the two families remain unmixed with any other nationality to the present time. He was the fourth in a family of eleven, and the oldest son that lived to manhood; of feeble health until five years old, but after that age troubled with no diseases except those that are peculiar to children. His boyhood was spent on his father's farm, which was situated two miles from the village, or centre of the town. Of an active, energetic nature, he always needed restraint to keep his ambition within the bounds of his physical strength. The earliest rudiments of education seemed to be acquired intuitively; and with that came an intense love of study and desire for knowledge, which, however, he could not be allowed to gratify unrestrained on account of the effect on his physical condition; but by alternately taking a term at school and one at home, he seemed to have attained a vigorous constitution. He attended the common school at home until the autumn he was twelve years old; he went to Lawrence Academy at Groton one term, and the next year he attended Appleton Academy, at New Ipswich, N. H., two terms. After that, a high school having been established in our town he attended that, and assisted his father about the farm until his entrance at Phillips Exeter Academy, September 4, 1872. This was a school of his own choice, and a great enjoyment to him because of the opportunity of study unchecked, and the chance to attend lectures 'so superior to anything he had before had access to,' as he expressed it. During the next spring vacation — March, 1873 — his father died (of pneumonia), which made it necessary for him to relinquish school for a time, to assist in the settlement of affairs. He returned to his studies the next September, graduated, and took the examination at Cambridge the following June, with the other members of the class who entered Harvard College, where he had chosen to continue his studies because he thought it the best institution of learning in the land.

"In June, 1875, two days after his return from Cambridge, his favorite sister died quite suddenly, — favorite, because nearest him in age and of similar tastes.

"While assisting in the settlement of his father's estate he became convinced that there was property enough left, if judiciously managed, to support the family and insure the means for a good education for the younger members of it; and from the time he was twenty-one years old he assumed that care, with a judgment and wisdom seemingly born of the need; and it was his devotion to this trust that tended to undermine his health, quite as much as his intense application to study. During the summer of 1877 he had two severe hemorrhages from his lungs, which so reduced his system that his physicians advised him to spend the winter following in some milder climate. He went to California, but returned in May in time to attend the class examinations. The summer following he spent at the Adirondacks and the Thousand Islands. His health seeming to be established again in the autumn, he decided to resume study. He was afterwards convinced that this decision was the great mistake of his life, more than once regretting that he did not heed the warning of broken health, and choose some more active out-of-door employment.

"He had a severe inward struggle while deciding which profession to adopt, his preference being for the ministry; but the trouble in his lungs being largely of a bronchial nature, he feared the effect of too much speaking, so chose the law. I recall a remark he made while telling me his decision; it was: 'A good, upright, conscientious lawyer is a power for good in a community, not excelled by a preacher even, for it is one's daily life that exerts an influence, more than the words he speaks.' He grew very fond of the profession as he learned more of its details, and often spoke of its many avenues of usefulness.

"He entered the Law School, September, 1878. In May, 1880, his failing health compelled him to leave 'for a few days' rest,' he said on coming home; 'then he would go back to examinations, then home for the whole summer's rest, and the state of his health should determine his future course;' but on the evening of the 23d of May a much more severe hemorrhage than any preceding so reduced him that for weeks he was unable to speak aloud or leave his bed. His voice never again acquired its former strength, was always husky, and its use to any extent occasioned weariness. In August he went by private conveyance to the White Mountains, but returned early in September, fully convinced that his only chance of recovery was in seeking a warmer climate. Not being able to endure the long journey to California, and being advised by physicians to avoid Florida, he went first to the Cumberland table-lands of Tennessee, later to Georgia, but not finding climate or accommodations congenial, he came to the Blue Ridge, and located at Asheville, N. C. He seemed to be slowly improving through the winter, but so slowly that he was never willing to have anything written to excite false hopes in the home friends; and now, as I remember it, I think the seeming was more from will-power than real improvement: you who knew him must have noticed its force in his nature. In the spring of 1881 his physician advised him to engage in some business to occupy his mind and keep him out in the open air. Following this advice, he established a lumber-yard, there being none in the town, and the odor from the fresh wood being considered beneficial. He employed men to do the labor, being forbidden by his physician to use his arms; also a book-keeper, as writing had a most injurious effect upon him. After a while he took a partner, — a Northern man, who was well acquainted with the different kinds of lumber needed by house-builders.

"He soon gained the confidence of those with whom he dealt by his manner of conducting his business, and made many friends among all classes of society. Always cheerful, genial from principle rather than by nature, he could not fail to win friends. In the early part of September, 1881, he had another slight hemorrhage, from which he soon rallied and continued quite comfortable through the winter, being able to ride to his office every day (he could never walk much after the attack in May, 1880, owing to shortness of breath).

"In March, 1882, another severe hemorrhage prostrated him, from which he never rallied. Although confined to the house but a few days, his strength never came to him, and his flesh gradually wasted; he was able to be in the open air and take a ride every day that the weather permitted, even to August 1, but the next day he awoke with a hemorrhage which exhausted him very much. He was very feeble through the day, and restless through the night, and the following day was troubled about breathing; but about nine o'clock that evening he fell into a quiet sleep which lasted until nearly four o'clock, when, without a motion or change, he ceased to breathe.

"As I have written before, he was always cheerful, unselfish to the last, always hopeful that his disease might take a favorable turn, yet never deceiving himself as to the reality. He spoke often of passing on to a higher existence, yet said it was each one's duty to prolong the life here to its fullest extent. Death had no terror for him, because in the All Father he recognized a loving parent who 'Doeth all things well.' His remains were brought home and laid in the family lot in the cemetery in Stow, Mass., beside those of his father, two brothers, and three sisters. I accompanied Edward when he went South, and remained with him all the time, the two youngest of my family being away at school, and the home being closed meanwhile. Edward may have inherited a predisposition to lung trouble, as my mother and all my near relatives on her side died of consumption; but I am, and always have been, perfectly free from any such tendency.

"I was always surprised at the thoughtfulness which he showed in the management of our business affairs, and at his keen insight into human nature; it seemed a part of his nature to read and measure those with whom he dealt. He was very conscientious and unselfish, hence his devotion to the trust he assumed. He was not wholly dependent on himself, though had he completed his course of study at the Law School, his inheritance would have been all used. Although very generous with whatever he earned, which he considered his very own, yet what he inherited he looked upon as a trust, once saying to me, that he 'could not pay a dollar of that away without questioning if he got its full value, because it seemed to him to represent so much of his father's strength;' but knowing how much his father prized an education, he had no scruples about using it to increase his knowledge.

"I have many of his letters, but they are all more or less mixed with business or family affairs. Those to his younger sisters and brother contain scraps of fatherly advice; they are not all grave, by any means, but many are witty and laugh-provoking. He often said it was 'each one's duty to make life sunny for others, whatever it was to themselves; that none had any right to sadden others' lives;' and he practised the precept.

"He enjoyed his life at the South, never tiring of the magnificent scenery, or the glorious sunsets of that mountain region; besides, the rarefied air of that locality helped his breathing, and surely prolonged his life, though his disease had progressed beyond cure."

HERBERT HOWARD ROBERTS.

Born at ~~Boston, July 6,~~ Charlestown, Sept 17. 1857. "Since I left College I have led a business life. I am connected with the firm of J. W. Roberts, Wholesale Grocers, Boston, Mass.

"My present address is 148 Blackstone Street, Boston, Mass. My home is in Reading, Mass."

WARREN MERTON ROBINSON.

Born at East Taunton, Mass., June 24, 1857. "Since leaving College I have taught in the High School at Hyannis, Mass. I have studied law with Hon. William Gaston, and was admitted to the Bar in the fall of 1879. For the two years of 1882 and 1883 I have kept books for W. B. Gifford & Co., 'Dealers in Carpets, Window Shades, and Paper Hangings, Dry and Fancy Goods, Dress-Making and Millinery,' Lynn, Mass.

"I was married, October 24, 1883, in Dorchester, to Miss Susan Maria Atherton, of that place.

"My address is care of B. F. Spinney, Lynn, Mass."

ALFRED HARRISON ROGERS.

Born at Le Claire, Iowa, February 2, 1858. In December, 1883, he wrote: "I read law, after graduating, for one year in the office of E. L. Bartlett, Wyandotte, and was admitted to the Bar at Olathe, Kansas, November, 1879. During 1879 I wrote several articles and letters, which were published in the Kansas City 'Journal;' the articles were mostly philosophical. I never practised law. I was in the milling, lumber, and banking business at Spring Hill, Kansas, with my brother, from June, 1879, to October, 1882, when I came here (Wyandotte) and established my present business.

"Samuel Shepherd, of our Class, came here a few Sabbaths since, delivered a trial sermon before the Congregational Society, and was by them called to fill their pulpit. He assumes his duties about January 1.

"I was married, May 18, 1881, to Miss Kittie G. Coburn, Phœnix, N. Y., and have one child, Percival Caldwell, born June 26, 1882."

He is now cashier of the Bank of Wyandotte, at Wyandotte, Kansas.

BARNEY SACHS.

Born at Baltimore, Md., January 2, 1858. "I left America very soon after graduation, to study medicine at the University of Strasburg, Germany, and took my degree of M.D. in June, 1882. While at Strasburg I was engaged in special physiological work, under Professor Goltz, in the Physiological Laboratory of the University. Since taking my degree I have been continuing my professional studies at Vienna, Berlin, and London.

"My publications are — an article entitled 'Ueber den Einfluss des Rückenmarkes auf die Nieren Secretion,' in Pflüger's 'Archiv für Physiologie,' 1881; also Inaugural Dissertation, containing the article mentioned above and the results of investigations: 'Ueber die Beziehungen des Rückenmarkes zum Künstlichen Diabetes,' Strasburg, J. Trübner, 1882.

"My permanent address is 38 West 59th Street, New York City."

THOMAS JORDAN SAUZADE.

Born at Jersey City, February 6, 1857. "Permanent address, Englewood, N. J. No occupation. No degrees or honors. No offices or positions. No books, pamphlets, nor articles written. Not married. No wife, no children. No items of interest."

WILLIAM HENRY SCHAEFER.

Born at Baltimore, Md., May 12, 1857. Asks not to be quoted in his replies. For two years he held a position as tutor in St. Mark's School, Southborough, Mass. In the autumn of 1880 entered the Harvard Law School, but left in the following February, because of his health, and took charge of a private pupil until August. In the autumn of 1881 he became an instructor at Adams Academy, Quincy, Mass., where he remained until March, 1882. He next accepted a position, at Charleston, S. C., in the High School, which he still retains.

He was married, July 1, 1882, to Florence Moulton, of Boston.

SAMUEL SHEPHERD.

Born in Canada, February 14, 1850. "I taught in the Grammar Department of the Dalton Academy and Normal Institute at Dalton, Ill., during the first year after graduating. I then became a student in the Chicago Theological Seminary, and continued my studies there until I finished the course, and graduated in the spring of 1882. Shortly before graduating I had accepted a call to the pastorate of the Congregational Church in Shabbona, Ill., and after leaving the Seminary entered at once upon the duties of that office. I remained at Shabbona till the end of 1883, when I resigned, and accepted a call to the Congregational Church in Wyandotte, Kansas, where I am now laboring.

"I was married, September 3, 1878, to Miss Sarah H. Moody. My daughter, Grace Clair Shepherd, was born August 22, 1879. On February 4, 1882, Irene Gertrude, my second child, was born. She died at Shabbona, Ill., May 11, 1883."

PAUL SHOREY.

Born at Davenport, Iowa, May 3, 1857. Has been in Athens with Professor Goodwin.

"Address, care of D. L. Shorey, Portland Block, Chicago."

JAMES FULTON SLADE.

Born at Boston, February 8, 1857. "Four months abroad, then fifteen months at the Bessemer Steel Works at Troy. I left that business four years ago, since which time I have been connected with Calico Print Works in Passaic, N. J., with office at 110 Leonard Street, New York."

HERBERT WEIR SMYTH.

Born at Wilmington, Del., August 8, 1857. Entered the Class in the Junior year.

"For items of historical interest I have little to offer, not having any descendants, much less wife. I have been four years in Europe, — one and a half at Leipzig, the remainder at Göttingen, — but left, in response to a call to Williams College as instructor in Latin and Sanskrit, before I had time to take my degree. Abroad I studied Greek, Latin, and Sanskrit especially. Address, Williamstown, Mass."

ALFRED WARNER SPENCER.

Born at Dorchester, Mass., October 27, 1855. "After graduating with my Class in 1878, I went into business in New York as a member of the firm of Bottum, Phipps, &

Spencer, Silk Manufacturers, but returned to Boston in the following year, and afterwards joined the Boston Stock Exchange. I have since been associated in business with my father at 31 State Street. Have spent part of my time in travelling, and part at Dorchester in my greenhouse."

WILLIAM ANTHONY SPINNEY.

Born at Wilmont, N. S., January 27, 1847. "I joined the Class at the beginning of Junior year. Went to Nantucket, August, 1878; had charge of the High School there one year. Delivered a lecture there before the Temperance Lecture Association on 'Some Light Suggestions.' I was invited to Newtonville in September, 1879, and became master at the Adams School, which position I still hold. Delivered in 1880 a lecture on 'Some Colored Remarks,' before the West Newton Lyceum; also this year an essay on 'Women in Agriculture and Floriculture,' before the Newton Horticultural Society, and an essay on 'American Humorists,' before the Newtonville Every Saturday Club.

"I was married, November 24, 1879, at Nantucket, to Mrs. Caroline W. (Starbuck) Merriam, of that place. I have a son, Edmund S. Spinney, born in West Newton, Mass., March 10, 1883."

GEORGE HERMON STEARNS.

Born at Mansfield, Mass., February 10, 1856. "I studied mining; also taught school in Cleveland, Ohio, and Kansas City, Mo. Was then assayer and amalgamator to the Model Mining Co., at Antelope, Yarapai County, Arizona."

Not heard from since 1881, except that his "address is East Rockport, Ohio."

WILLIAM OAKMAN STEARNS.

Born at Newton Centre, Mass., November 18, 1855. "Studied at the Newton Theological Institution one year, then attended lectures in classical philology in the University of Berlin, Frederick Wilhelms Universitat. Since my return from Germany, April, 1881, I have spent two years in the Newton Theological Institution (Baptist), graduating in regular course, June 13, 1883. Since graduation I have been seeking a pastorate, but have not as yet succeeded in my search. I have also occupied my time in teaching and writing, and two articles have appeared in the religious press.

"I was married at Newton Centre, October 15, 1884, to Ellen M. Abbott."

Since Stearns wrote the above he has found a pastorate, and writes from Cazenovia, N. Y.: "I am settled here with a good church, and matters progress well."

RUSSELL STURGIS.

Born at Boston, December 16, 1856. "After leaving College in 1878 I entered the Harvard Medical School. I took the degree of M.D. in 1881. Became a member of the Massachusetts Medical Society the same year. Since 1881 I have become a member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New Brunswick, and was appointed Visiting Physician of the Boston Dispensary, January 1, 1884.

"On March 30, 1880, I was married to Anne Outram Bangs, of Boston, at Trinity Church, Boston. On December 31, 1880, a son was born, Russell Sturgis. On March 25, 1882, Anne Outram Sturgis was born. On January 4, 1885, a daughter."

Address, 190 Marlborough Street, Boston.

GEORGE ELIAB STURTEVANT.

Born at Charlestown, Mass., November 30, 1857. "Since July, 1878, have been connected with the Boston and Maine Railroad as clerk in the General Passenger and Ticket Office."

Address, 31 Green Street, Charlestown, Mass.

WILLIAM SULLIVAN.

Born in Ireland, June 9, 1854. "Entered Harvard Law School and stayed there two years. From July, 1880, to March, 1881, I was engaged with Hon. Edward L. Pierce, in getting his book on 'Railroads' ready for press. Returned to Cambridge, April, 1881, to continue study of the law, and in June, 1881, took the degree of LL.B. at the Harvard Law School. In August, 1881, I entered the office of Judge E. R. Hoar, as a law student, and there have since remained. Was admitted to the Bar in the County of Suffolk on June 22, 1882, and have since been engaged in the practice of the law at 5 Pemberton Square."

DAVID ARTHUR TAGGART.

Born at Goffstown, N. H., January 30, 1858. "From graduation till September, 1881, I continued the study of the law in the office of Judge David Cross, in Manchester, N. H.; on September 1, was admitted to practice, and immediately formed a law partnership with Judge Cross under the name of Cross & Taggart, which continues at this date. Was chosen a delegate to the State and Senatorial Conventions in September, 1880, and delivered several political speeches during the presidential campaign of 1880. Was a member of the last New Hampshire Legislature, and served on two of the most important committees: Revision of the Statutes, and Committee on Elections, being chairman of the latter committee. Nothing of importance has transpired concerning myself that would interest you, and I can only say that I am perfectly satisfied with my present lot, which is very considerable for a young lawyer to acknowledge."

FREDERIC WESTON TAYLOR.

Born at Cambridge, June 22, 1856. "Finished the three-years course at the Harvard Medical School, June, 1881. August, 1881, entered the Massachusetts General Hospital, as Medical House-Officer. June, 1882, received the degree of M.D., Harvard. July 31, 1882, finished service at the Massachusetts General Hospital. August, 1882, to March, 1883, in Germany; most of the time in Leipzig, studying medicine. April to September, 1883, in Vienna, studying medicine. December, 1883, I opened an office at 141 North Avenue, North Cambridge, Mass."

HENRY OSBORN TAYLOR.

Born at New York, December 5, 1856. "The first year after leaving College I was studying law in the Columbia Law School; the second year I was studying law at Leipzig, Germany. I am now practising law in New York City.

"Articles written: 'Development of Constitutional Government in the American Colonies,' in the 'Magazine of American History;' 'The Right of a Third Person to sue on a Contract made in his Favor,' in 'American Law Review.' I have also written a text-book on the law of stock corporations." The Boston "Daily Advertiser" recently reviewed Taylor's book as follows: —

"Mr. Henry O. Taylor's treatise on the 'Law of Private Corporations' is a result of devotion to the law of uncommon powers trained and enriched by an unusual range of liberal studies. Consequently, one finds in it the unexpected quality of inviting the reader who opens it for business only, to read on for entertainment. A yet deeper merit is that it is original and unique in its elaborate development of the legal relations involved in the existence of a corporation, with an explicit and constant warning against the ambiguities suggested by the fiction of the 'legal person.' As Mr. Taylor says: 'By dismissing this fiction, a clearer view may be had of the actual human beings interested, whose rights may then be determined without unnecessary mystification.' The author's familiarity with German methods has not only aided him in his consideration of Roman law, but has led him by way of introduction to develop the notion of a corporation both historically and logically, and to analyze it before proceeding to the necessarily fragmentary points of the existing law of England and the United States.

"The research and the power of reasoning displayed by Mr. Taylor in carrying out this plan, at once scholarly and practical, are among the most striking events of our modern legal literature. The distinctively modern character of his work in its union of profundity of thought with breadth of learning, and of acuteness with good sense, expressed in a natural style of ease and simplicity, render it most fit for those who wish to enter most advantageously upon the study of the legal relations arising through the prosecution of a corporate enterprise. They who are already more or less familiar with such subjects and who appreciate the opportunities afforded by them, not for ingenuity merely, but for large and just conceptions of complex and great interests, and for consummate ability in practice, whether in or out of court, will find Mr. Taylor a welcome and suggestive counsellor."

"My address is No. 43 West 31st Street, New York."

HUBERT ENGLEBERT TESCHEMACHER.

Born at Boston, June 30, 1856. "Studied law for six months; then went to Texas, where I remained until May, 1879. In September, 1879, came to Wyoming; and in December, 1879, went into the cattle business with F. de Billier and my brother, A. M. Teschemacher. Our range is on Bitter Cottonwood, a tributary of the North Platte, about one hundred miles northwest of Cheyenne City." He is still in the cattle business, and is President of the Teschemacher & De Billier Cattle Company, who have a paid-up capital of about half a million dollars.

"Am at present serving as a member of the House of Representatives of the Wyoming Legislature, which is the only political office I have held.

"I have settled permanently in Wyoming, and am a member of the Executive Committee of the Wyoming Stock-Growers' Association, and one of the Board of Governors of the Cheyenne Club. Address, Box 316, Cheyenne, Wyoming."

NATHANIEL NILES THAYER.

Born at Boston, July 16, 1856. "Have been in the commission business since I graduated,—from 1878 to 1880 as clerk; since then as member of the firm of Barry, Thayer, & Co., 32 India Street, Boston. Was chosen a trustee of the Boston Five Cent Savings Bank two years since, and still hold the position.

"I was married, October 18, 1883, to Anna Caroline Hobart, in East Bridgewater, Mass."

CHARLES BAYARD TRAIL.

Born at Frederick, Md., January 2, 1857. "I have been delegate to several county conventions, and to the Congressional Convention at Oakland, Md., 1880, receiving the largest vote on the delegate ticket; I was chairman of the Frederick County delegation and secretary of the convention.

"Was admitted to the Bar, in the February term of Court, 1880, and practised in Frederick City." He gave up his law practice to accept the position of "Secretary of United States Legation at Rio Janeiro from October 9, 1883, to April 9, 1884. Chargé d'Affaires from October 9, 1884.

"Address, Legation of the United States, Rio de Janeiro, Brazil."

BAYARD TUCKERMAN.

Born at New York, July 2, 1855. "Published, in 1882, 'History of English Prose Fiction.'

"I was married in 1882, to Anne Osgood, daughter of the Rev. John Cotton Smith, D.D., of New York. One daughter, born July 24, 1883, named Elizabeth Wolcott.

"Address, 80 Washington Square, New York."

PAUL TUCKERMAN.

Born at New York, November 17, 1856. "Iron business, with Tuckerman, Mulligan, & Co., at 2 Wall Street, New York."

JAMES ARTHUR TUFTS.

Born at Alstead, N. H., April 26, 1855. "Have been instructor in Phillips Exeter Academy since September, 1878.

"I was married, December 21, 1878, at Arlington, Mass., by Rev. A. P. Peabody, to Effie Locke. I have a daughter, Effie Miriam, born November 27, 1879; a son, Irving Elting, born December 23, 1881."

HERMAN FRANK VICKERY.

Born at Rochester, N. Y., August 20, 1856. "Was student in the Harvard Medical School for three years. Good health meanwhile, and experiences interesting but not exciting. August 1, 1881, to August 1, 1882, I was Medical House Pupil in the Massachusetts General Hospital. Sailed August 5, 1882, for Europe, to study medicine and to travel. Got home November 7, 1883, and settled in Boston, at 8 Hancock Street, December 5, 1883. Was chosen a member of the Massachusetts Medical Society in February, 1882, and got my M.D. at Cambridge, in June, 1882. I had a satisfactory time abroad, and in general have had good luck since 1878."

CHARLES HENRY VINTON.

Born at Boston, Mass., August 28, 1855. "I spent nearly a year, after graduating, abroad in Germany. Entered the Law School in the fall of 1879, and was there till the spring of 1881. There is nothing to add. I am not now so much engaged in the occupation of waiting for something to turn up, as sliding about in the delusive pursuit of happiness. You will of course understand that I have no wife, no children, no dates and plans, no maiden-name, no books, pamphlets, or articles written, offices or positions held, degrees, or honors."

HENRY PRINCE WARDEN.

Born at Astoria, N. Y., October 12, 1855. "Unoccupied until February, 1879. February, 1879, to June, 1879, at the College Library as volunteer assistant. June, 1879, to May, 1881, in the office of the Purchasing Agent, Chicago, Burlington, & Quincy Railroad, at Chicago. May, 1881, to February, 1882, unoccupied. During this interval I was in England for two months. February, 1882, to September, 1882, in the office of the New York & New England Railroad, as Purchasing Agent, at Boston. September, 1882, to January, 1883, with the Hatheway Steamship Company, at Boston. January, 1883, to April, 1883, unoccupied. April, 1883, to date, with the Monadnock Paper Mills, at Bennington, N. H., as clerk."

BENJAMIN WELLES.

Born at Boston, January 11, 1857. "After graduating, I passed a year at the Columbia Law School, which I left for the purpose of making a tour in Europe. I there spent nearly eighteen months, chiefly in France and Italy. On my return I engaged in preparing for a business life, in the active participation of which I hope to enter next autumn (1881). My permanent address will be the Union Club, 1 West 21st Street, New York City."

Whether the preparation was such that he was enabled to participate actively in the struggles of the business world the Secretary has no means of knowing, but judges not, as he has been told that Welles has been "making another tour in Europe."

HENRY WHEELER.

Born at Boston, April 28, 1856. "Immediately after graduating I went to Europe, and stayed there until September, 1879, occupying my time in travel. On my return to the United States I entered the Harvard Law School." He was at the Law School two years, and then studied in the office of Hutchins & Wheeler for a year. "Was admitted to practice at the Suffolk Bar on June 13, 1882, and have since been engaged in the practice of my profession as one of the firm of Hutchins & Wheeler, at 38 Sears Building, Boston."

JOSEPH CUTLER WHITNEY.

Born at Boston, December 7, 1856. Engaged in the wool business as clerk, first with the firm of Harding, Gray, & Dewey, of Boston, and after the 1st of January, 1879, with the firm of Harding, Martin, & Co., in whose interests I passed the spring and summer in Montana and other Western Territories. Before my return I took the opportunity to visit the Yellowstone National Park and see the Falls of the Yellowstone, the Geysers, and other curious freaks of nature there; starting from Helena and returning to that city. I made the trip of about four hundred miles on horseback. Towards the end of the year I left Harding, Martin, & Co., and entered the employ of George B. Drake & Co., in the same business; became a partner in the firm January 1, 1881, and am still connected with it. During the past summer I made another Western wool trip, visiting Texas, New Mexico, Colorado, and some of the cities and States nearer home where wool and sheep men are to be found.

I was married at Boston, November 9, 1882, to Georgiana Hayward, of Boston, by the Rev. Henry W. Foote.

CHARLES KILBORN WILLIAMS.

Born at Rutland, Vt., March 8, 1856. "After one year at the Harvard Law School, I tried Columbia for a while, but finally returned to Rutland, where I was admitted to the Bar in September, 1880, and was appointed Notary Public. I earned by the law the first six months $9.50."

Is still living at Rutland.

HENRY AUSTIN WOOD.

Born at Upton, Mass., October 9, 1855. "Since graduating I have completed the four-years course in medicine at the Harvard Medical School, received the degrees of A.M. and M.D., and taken the service of eighteen months at the Boston City Hospital. I am now in practice. My address, 633 Warren Street, Boston, is probably temporary."

ALFRED WORCESTER.

Born at Waltham, Mass., June 22, 1855. "Sub-Master in the Waltham High School, 1878–80. At Harvard College, 1880–81. A.M. in 1881. Medical School, 1881–83. M.D. in 1883. Practising medicine in Waltham. Have published an essay on 'Gymnastics' in the 'Popular Science Monthly,' May, 1883."

GILBERT MONTALAND YATES.

Born at Canajoharie, N. Y., November 19, 1854. "Taught school a year in Hoboken, N. J., and, for six months, taught in one of the evening schools in New York City, in addition to the day-school work. Studied law with a lawyer at Canajoharie."

THEODORE TRIPP YOUNG.

Born at Sanford, Maine, October 27, 1854. "Since graduation I have done some tutoring and some school teaching. The rest of the time I have been in the milk business and farming. During the years 1880 and 1881 was one of the Common Council in the city of Saco. I also held the office of Lecturer in the Saco Patrons of Husbandry. I have been Principal of the Spring Street Grammar School in Saco since September, 1882."

HARRISON OTIS APTHORP.

Born at Northampton, Mass., August 20, 1856. Left our Class in the Junior year on account of illness, and joined the Class of 1879 in their Junior year.

"I took my A.B. in 1879, and A.M. in 1880. Taught Classics three years at St. Mark's School, Southborough, and am this year, 1883–84, taking a post-graduate course (in Classics) at Cambridge, with a view to teaching as a profession.

FRANCIS GILBERT ATTWOOD.

Born at Jamaica Plain, Mass., September 29, 1856. "I left the Class at the end of Junior year, since when I have studied drawing with the late Dr. William Rimmer, and at the Art Museum School. I am now a regular contributor to the New York 'Life.'

"Address, Greenwood Avenue, Jamaica Plain, Mass."

HENRY WILLARD AUSTIN.

Born at West Roxbury, Mass., February 25, 1858. His father wrote of him: —

"My son, Henry Willard Austin, became a member of Class of 1878 in 1874. He translated, in 'Harvard Advocate,' November, 1874, an Ode of Horace, and a poem of Catullus, December 11, 1874. He left Harvard University the latter part of 1875, sailed for Australia, March 1, 1876, returned to this country, December 6, 1877. After leaving Harvard he was with Mr. Knapp at Plymouth till he went to Australia. His life since has been passed in Baltimore, Washington, Arkansas, and New Orleans. He has published many poetical articles, and some of prose, in various magazines and newspapers. He is now connected with the 'Times' (Democrat), of New Orleans. Some of his prose and some of his poetical productions show great ability."

He is now connected with the News Bureau of the World's Industrial and Cotton Centennial Exposition at New Orleans.

Address, 138 Gravier Street, New Orleans, La.

CHARLES CHESTER BOLTON.

Born at Cleveland, Ohio, March 23, 1855. "I entered Harvard in 1873, with the Class of '77, having prepared at Exeter, N. H. In 1874 I was obliged to discontinue my collegiate course on account of my eyes, and in 1874 and 1875 was in Europe having my eyes treated, etc. In September, 1875, I continued my course with '78. In September, 1876, I did not join '78 again or go on with my course, as my eyes were in such a shape that my doctor would not permit it. I have been with Rhodes & Co., of Cleveland, in the coal, iron-ore, and pig-iron business since leaving College, in the latter department.

"I have always considered myself more a member of '77 than of '78, having been with a number of '77 fellows through Exeter, and having associated more with '77 while at Cambridge than with '78.

" Was married, November 24, 1880, to Julia A. Castle. One son, born at Cleveland, September 5, 1882, — Chester Castle Bolton.

" My permanent address is 1393 Euclid Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio."

NICHOLAS PENNIMAN BOND.

Born at Baltimore, Md., September 27, 1855. Left the Class Junior year. " On leaving College I went at once into a law office in Baltimore. Was called to the Bar, April 2, 1880. Was then associated with George H. Chandler of New Hampshire, Harvard Law School 1867."

Is married. Not heard from since 1881.

FRANK BRAINERD.

Born at Portland, Conn., October 23, 1854. Was with our Class Sophomore year. The Secretary of 1877 said of him in his last Report: " Has been engaged in quarrying brown stone at Portland, Conn., since leaving College.

" Married at Hartford, Conn., October 8, 1879, to Ida Gillum.

" Address, Portland, Conn."

CHARLES RICHARD BRIGGS.

Born at Boston, August 7, 1855. Was with our Class through the Freshman year. He has been engaged in the manufacture of woollens.

Address, Norfolk House, Roxbury, Mass.

*DANIEL GALLUP BRIGGS.

Born at Providence, R. I., September 20, 1853. Died of consumption, January 27, 1880. He was the son of Daniel Gallup and Harriet Maria (Thwing) Briggs. He joined our Class in the Junior year, but did not graduate.

LINCOLN FORBES BRIGHAM.

Born at New Bedford, Mass., July 26, 1855. Was with the Class of 1877 their Freshman year, and with our Class till our Junior year. The Secretary of 1877 says of him in his last Report: "He writes: 'Since leaving College I have been for two years in the office of Bullard & Wheeler, commission merchants, New York City.'"

He is now engaged in business in the West.

MIDDLETON SCHOOLBRED BURRILL.

Born at New York, October 16, 1856. He was with our Class through the Freshman year, then became a member of the Class of 1879, and graduated with them. "Studied law in the Columbia Law School. Lawyer, with the firm Blatchford, Seward, Griswold, & Da Costa, 29 Nassau Street, New York.

"Address, 9 East 56th Street, New York."

Not heard from since 1881.

JAMES EDWARD PERRY BUTTS.

"I entered Freshman in 1874; left in the same year on account of my eyes. After leaving College I did not engage in any business for a year, hoping to recover my eyesight and return to my Class, but have been unable to continue my studies to any extent. I am Superintendent of the Buttsville Coal Mines, Buttsville, Pa.

"Address at present, Geneva, Ontario County, N. Y."

CHARLES HENRY CHAPMAN.

Born at Guilford, N. H., June 4, 1849. Was in our Class Freshman year. Graduated with the Class of 1880. During part of the year 1880–81 he taught school at Asbury Park, N. J.

Has not been heard from.

*CHARLES EDWARD CHICKERING.

Born at Jamaica Plain, Mass., January 28, 1854. Died at Boston, January 20, 1875. He was the son of Thomas Edward and Caroline Augusta (Battell) Chickering.

Though with our Class so short a time, and the first of us to die, Chickering's cheerful smile and pleasant manners were winning him many friends when his untimely death took him from among us. Ten years have passed since we lost our bright, happy friend; but those of us who knew him best often think of him as when he was still with us, ever regretful that his life was not spared to fulfil its early promise.

CHARLES EDWARD CROSS.

Born at Portland, Maine, November 1, 1854. Was with our Class in the Freshman year.

HARRISON DUNHAM.

Born at Harvard, Mass., July 4, 1857. "I was in the Class of 1878, and stayed one year,—the Freshman year,—at Harvard College, and left it at the end of the year in A.D. 1875.

In A.D. 1881 I joined, or rather was admitted to, the Suffolk County Bar as an attorney-at-law, and am now practising as such at 19 Court Street, Boston. I received honors in jurisprudence — 'in Schola Jurisprudentiæ' — at Oxford, England, in A.D. 1879, from the University of Oxford.

"I was married, December 7, 1882, at Boston, Mass., to Miss Clara J. F. Patterson, also of Boston. I have one child, Harrison Dunham, Jr., born June 2, 1884.

"My permanent address is at 19 Court Street, Boston, Mass."

JAMES HERBERT DWINELL.

Born at Charlestown, Mass., December 12, 1854. "Entered College with the Class of 1878, and remained until just before the Christmas vacation of the following year (1875), when I left to go into business. I have been with but one firm, Dwinell, Hayward, & Co., at 1 Hamilton Street, Boston, since leaving College.

"I was married, June 23, 1879, at Winchester, Mass., to Alice Brimmer Magee, of Winchester. Have two children: James Fisher, born March 29, 1880, and Charlotte, born July 22, 1882."

HAROLD BAYARD EATON.

Born at Providence, R. I., January 30, 1858. "I left College as Senior for Germany. Was there nearly six semesters, studying medicine in Würzburg. Tutored on my return to this country; and in April, 1882, went as short-hand man for the Simonds Manufacturing Company, of Fitchburg. Have been with them ever since (excepting four months, when I was home on a vacation with typhoid-pneumonia), and have now full charge of their correspondence. Wrote a book; but, owing to lack of taste of publishers, it has not been printed."

ALFRED ELA.

Born at ~~Cambridge~~ Washington, D.C, October 14, 1857. He was in our Class Senior year. He was first engaged in business as a member of the firm of Ela Brothers, manufacturers of turned goods, Cambridgeport, and is now an agent and broker in fire and boiler insurance, with an office at 27 Congress Street, Boston.

GEORGE ESTIUS EMERSON.

Born at Haverhill, Mass., March 13, 1856. "I entered Harvard College with the Class of 1878 in September, 1874, and remained with it until the Christmas recess in 1875. I then asked for a leave of absence, intending to return after a short recuperation. The reason for taking this course was, that I did not consider my health sufficiently firm to warrant the pursuit of my studies farther at that time. Though I might have kept on with '78 (which I very much desired to do), yet I could not be satisfied with anything short of solid work and good standing; and therefore I severed my connection with the Class and College.

"I then turned my attention to the quiet, health-giving occupation of farming. To this business I devoted myself for two or three years, experimenting largely to ascertain, if possible, the most lucrative branch of the industry. But the returns aided by a restless nature created a dissatisfaction with this mode of life, and, in consequence, a desire to try something else. Next, I went to Cincinnati on a business and pleasure trip. I remained there a short time, meanwhile having secured a situation in the office of the Robinson Wagon Co.

"Returning East, I engaged in school-teaching in Plaistow, N. H. After following this business for a while, I made several business and pleasure trips through the States and Canada. On one of these trips I went to Minnesota to investigate the stock-raising business, and after looking over the State, located at Clear Water. After remaining here for some time, meanwhile acquainting myself thoroughly with the above-named business and gathering other facts of interest, I concluded that it was not the place for me to make a permanent location, and again I pulled up stakes and started for New England.

"And now, after many changes of business, location, and especially opinion, I am settled permanently (I hope) in the quiet town of Atkinson, N. H., for many years famous for its Academy, from which have gone forth many illustrious men and women.

"During all these years I have not forgotten my books, but they have ever been my constant companions. The zest and relish created in no small degree while in College has steadily increased.

"My τὸ καλλὸν καὶ ἀγαθὸν in respect to books is to appropriate the best of the best. At the present time I am deeply interested in the Chautauqua course of study. This, in my opinion, is one of the grandest educational schemes ever conceived and put into practical operation.

"There is one book, out of the many good ones in this course which possesses solid value and merit, that has been most beneficial and helpful to me, and as I wish it to be the same to others, I cannot refrain from mentioning it. It is Rev. Dr. J. B. Walker's 'Philosophy of the Plan of Salvation.'"

LINCOLN LEAR EYRE.

Born at Lucca, Italy, July 24, 1857. "I was in the Class of 1878 from its beginning until the fall of 1876, the beginning of the Junior year. I then came to Philadelphia and studied law in the office of Richard L. Ashhurst, at 225 South Sixth Street. I also attended the regular course of lectures at the Law School of the University of Pennsylvania, and graduated from there in June, 1879, with the degree of B. L.; and I was admitted to the Bar at the same time. I had the honor of delivering the law oration for my class at that Commencement. From that time to the present, I have devoted my time to the practice of the law, and, besides my own practice, am an assistant for Mr. Ashhurst. My permanent house address is 315 South Sixteenth Street.

"Besides my legal practice, I have paid some attention to politics, and have been engaged in public speaking and writing. The only legal article I have yet written is 'The Jurisdiction of New Jersey in the Case of Guiteau,' which appeared in the 'International Review' for May, 1882. I have also written a political article entitled 'The American Aristocracy,' published in the same magazine for January, 1883. Before publishing it, I delivered it as a lecture before the Social Science Association of this city, and it was published and distributed by them in pamphlet form. On February 23, of this year, I delivered a lecture before the Pennsylvania Club, on 'The Experiment of Democracy,' not yet printed. I have been kept so busily engaged with my profession, that I have not been able to devote as much time as I could wish to the attractive field of political literature. I am also under contract to publish a small book upon 'The Test of Responsibility for Crime in Cases of Insanity,' but my other engagements will delay this effort for some time to come."

CHARLES EVERETT FISH.

Born at Cotuit, Mass., May 26, 1854. "Left College at the close of my Freshman year, and accepted the principalship of the Edward Little High School at Auburn, Maine, which I held four years. Studied each summer at the Laboratory in Cambridge, and prepared myself to pass on Sophomore and Junior years' work. Joined the Class of '80 in the fall of 1879, and graduated in June, 1880. Requested to be enrolled as a member of the Class of '78. Some of the Faculty thought the request a proper one under the circumstances; others objected on the ground of establishing a bad precedent.

"Was married December 4, 1878, to Miss Mellie Rowe, Auburn, Maine. Have been presented with three children: Lavarah Dwinel, born April 25, 1880; Elizabeth Rowe, born September 14, 1881; and Charles Rowe, born December 1, 1883. On leaving College, I took the Chicopee Centre High School at Chicopee, Mass., of which I am now Principal."

HENRY FRANK.

Born at La Fayette, Ind., December 21, 1853. He was with the Class in the Freshman year.

FREDERICK LEWIS GAY.

Born at Boston, October 28, 1856. Left the Class in February, Senior year. "Studied medicine."

HENRY GOLDMAN.

Born at Philadelphia, Pa., September 21, 1857. Was with the Class Freshman year.

CALEB EMERY GOWEN.

Born at Roxbury, Mass., November 27, 1855. "I joined the Class of '78, entering as Freshman, but left it the beginning of Senior year. Began my business life as European Agent for Henry Mayo & Co., of Boston; on their failure went to New York as book-keeper for H. C. Howells & Co., in the importing business. Moved to Cleveland, Ohio, 1882, and went into the manufacturing business on my own account." Is now Secretary and Treasurer of the Kelley Island Quarry and Lime Co., at Cleveland.

"Married in Cleveland, October 13, 1881. My wife's maiden name, Gertrude Beardsley Younglove. Child born in Cleveland, May 8, 1883. Child's name, Albert Younglove Gowen. My wife died May 16, 1883."

ALBERT BREWER GUPTILL.

Born at Lubec, Maine, May 26, 1854. He was with the Class Freshman year. Is a lawyer at Fargo, Dakota.

GEORGE WALLINGFORD HILLS.

Born at Newton, Mass., November 9, 1853. Was in the Class of 1877, and joined ours Sophomore year. "I went to Chicago after graduation, to manage a through line of refrigerator cars between Chicago and Florida, and was also interested in a steamboat line on the St. Johns River, Florida, owning one-half interest. Returned East in the winter of 1878–79, and published the first number of the 'Railroad Advertiser,' in Boston. Edited and conducted this weekly eight-page journal for two years, disposing of my entire interest, finally, for $2,000. This paper is still conducted by the purchaser, and is very successful. I then engaged as General Manager of the New England Law and Collection Bureau.

"Have written largely for the Boston 'Sunday Herald' and other city papers; the Philadelphia 'Times,' Detroit 'Free Press,' 'Frank Leslie's,' and other journals, principally in the way of special articles of two or more columns each. Have also completed a summer book, 'A Modern Arcadia,' now in preparation at the publisher's. Another work, 'Fair Wellesley,' is in process of publication.

"Married, in summer of 1877, to Ella Frances Tomblen, of West Brookfield, Mass. Daughter born, November 15, 1878, — name, Florence Wallingford Hills."

Not heard from since 1881.

FRANK AUGUSTINE HOUSTON.

Born at Keene, N. H., December 16, 1858. "Though I entered College with the Class of '78, my connection with that Class was so short, only two months, that I have always considered myself a member of '79. If under these circumstances, any information touching myself will be of interest, I shall be glad to answer your questions. I joined the Class of '78, in October, 1874, and left it in December, on account of a long and severe illness. The next fall I entered the Class of '79, with which Class I graduated. I then entered the Harvard Law School, and graduated with honors in 1882. I then read law for six months in the office of W. E. L. Dillaway, and was admitted to the Suffolk Bar in February, 1883. The fact that I am a struggling young attorney is only too apparent from the foregoing.

"Address, 19 Milk Street, Room 2, Boston."

AUGUSTUS DROMEL IASIGI.

Born at Boston, April 14, 1854. Was in the Class of 1877, and was with our Class in the Freshman year. He was married in January, 1885.

EDMUND JANES JAMES.

Born at Jacksonville, Ill., May 21, 1855. "I joined the Class of '78 in November, 1874, coming in too late to get my name in the Catalogue of that year. I went to Europe in July, 1875, expecting to return within a year, and my name appears as a Sophomore in the Catalogue of 1875–76. I entered the University of Halle, in Prussia, and after studying two years at Halle, Berlin, and Leipzig, I took the degree of Doctor of Philosophy, in August, 1877, at Halle. For two years, 1877–78 and 1878–79, I was Principal of the Public Classical High School in Evanston, Ill. From 1879 to 1883, was Principal of the Classical Department in the Illinois State Normal School at Bloomington. From September, 1883, Professor of Finance and Administration in the University of Pennsylvania.

"My literary work has been as follows: 'Studien über den amerikanischen Zolltarif,' Halle, 1877; 'Illinois School Journal' edited, 1881–83; numerous articles on educational subjects in 'Education,' 'New England Journal,' and other educational periodicals; several articles in Lalor's 'Encyclopædia of Political Economy, Political Science, and Political History of the United States,' Chicago, 1881–83; 'Das Studium der Staatswissenschaften in America,' Conrad's 'Jahrbücher für Nationaloekonomie und Statistik,' Jena, 1883; 'The Classical Question in Germany,' 'Popular Science Monthly,' January, 1884; work as associate editor of 'Das Finanzarchiv,' Würzburg, Germany, and as associate editor of 'Wharton School Annals of Political Science.'

"I was married, August 22, 1879, to Margarethe Lange. Have had two children: Frank Roderick, born at Bloomington, Ill., June 25, 1880, died August 1, 1880; Karl Martin, born August 22, 1881."

WEBSTER KELLEY.

Was in the Class Freshman year.

FRANK IRVING KENDALL.

Born at Woburn, Mass., February 11, 1857. Was with our Class into the Senior year.

As Kendall has made no replies to circulars, and many of the Class were deeply interested in his supposed sad death, E. F. Johnson has, at the Secretary's request, written the following account of him: —

"Towards the latter end of July, 1878, Kendall went to San Francisco, where his parents had then been living for some time. He went without any particular plans in view, and in the expectation of returning to Cambridge in the autumn for study; but finding a business opening there with H. Hughes & Co., grain and merchandise brokers, he immediately went to work for them as a clerk and salesman. In January, 1879, he became a member of the firm; and during the two succeeding years, judging from his letters, he was on the highway leading to a successful business career.

"In January, 1881, he very unexpectedly turned up in Woburn, having left San Francisco in December, on a business trip East. He spent a day or two in Cambridge and Boston, and left for New York, January 23, on his return home. He told me and others, during this visit, that he was engaged to be married to Miss Masten, of San Francisco, and that the wedding-day had been set for February 17, immediately after his expected return to San Francisco.

"After leaving Boston, he visited Preston in New York; and, I think, called on Brune in Baltimore. He had a lawsuit to attend to in St. Louis early in February, and, it seems, remained in the latter city until the 14th of that month; for on that date he sent a telegram to his partner, informing him of his intended departure for Kansas City that evening. After having sent this despatch, Kendall mysteriously disappeared, apparently leaving his family and friends completely in the dark as to his doings and whereabouts for the next three or four months. The following extracts, taken from the Oakland (Cal.) 'Daily Evening Tribune,' of June 27, 1881, give the sequel to this rather peculiar episode in the life of our classmate: —

"'. . . Kendall not appearing in Oakland or San Francisco, and much anxiety being felt concerning him, his father, Mr. J. R. Kendall, left on the 24th, in the hope of getting some trace of him. After visiting St. Louis, Kansas City, and other points, he sadly returned home with no tidings of the missing boy. Time passed, and still no tidings, and he was given up as lost, it being supposed he had been foully dealt with. His drafts on the firm had been limited, amounting to only $750, and his well-known character precluded any suspicion of absconding.

"'A short time ago Mr. Kendall, Sr., was rejoiced, and his fears set at rest, by the receipt of a letter from his son asking for means to return home. The request was not only complied with, but Mr.

Kendall and his wife proceeded immediately to Ogden, where they met him, and reached Oakland on Thursday last.

"'. . . The substance of Kendall's statement is that he remembers nothing from the time of leaving St. Louis, until he found himself sick in a hospital in New Orleans. He was taken sick when he started from St. Louis, and got on the wrong train. The reason why he sent no word home was that his coat and papers were lost on the cars, so that he could not be identified, and he was unable to make himself known. In the mean time the hospital people sent him off on a sea-voyage to Honduras. On the way out he had a relapse, was left on shore for medical treatment, and was called for on the return trip. Upon his return to New Orleans he was penniless and unknown, and unable to telegraph. He then wrote to his father with the above result. His baggage, which was checked to Kansas City, remained unclaimed all the time.'

"Some time in 1882, Kendall dissolved partnership with Hughes, and afterwards went into the salmon packing business at Valencia. My latest information was to the effect that Kendall was engaged on a San Francisco newspaper in some business or advertising capacity.

"He was married early in September, 1881, to Miss Marguerite L. Masten. A child, that I am told is a girl, was born in July, 1882."

*FREDERIC CLEVELAND KENT.

Born at Brooklyn, N. Y., March 20, 1858. Died at New York, December, 1884.[1] He was the son of George Lewis and Virginia Gilpin Kent. He left our Class in the Sophomore year.

[1] The earlier part of this Report was already printed before the Secretary heard of Kent's death; consequently, in the list of members there is no star against his name.

WILLIAM MURRAY LE MOYNE.

Born at Pittsburgh, Pa., June 29, 1855. Left College at the end of the Junior year to study law in his father's office in Chicago.

GEORGE ABNER LITTLEFIELD.[1]

Born at Chelsea, Mass., February 11, 1851. "I was not with your Class during the Freshman year. I did not take my degree with you, being out teaching; but took it in 1881, being assigned by the Faculty, at my request, to the Class of 1878. I was with you about two and a half years, I believe.

"Since 1878 I have been Superintendent of Schools in Malden, Mass., Lawrence, Mass., Supervisor at Boston, Mass., and am now Superintendent of Schools at Newport, R. I. Various educational addresses and reports written.

"Married at Malden in 1879. Wife's maiden name, Emma Warren Bancroft. Children: Catherine Frances Littlefield, born at Boston, September 4, 1880; James Bancroft Littlefield, born at Boston, March 19, 1882."

EDWARD OLIVER LORD.

Born at Somersworth, N. H., March 1, 1856. "Left Harvard, Class of 1878, on account of ill-health, just before Freshman semi-annuals. Entered Colby University, Class of 1877, where I graduated with first part. Have since received the degree of A.M. After graduation I taught two terms in [1] Through an oversight, Littlefield's name has been placed among the "Members not Graduates," instead of among the "Graduates." The second paragraph on page 3 should read: "Five of our Class have received their A.B. degrees, etc., bringing the total number of graduates up to 148." And on page 8 Littlefield's name should follow "Littauer," being omitted on page 9.

the Great Falls High School. In August, 1878, I engaged in printing and publishing at Great Falls. I wrote articles relative to town history, which appear in 'History of Strafford and Rockingham Counties, New Hampshire.'

"I was married, March 12, 1880, to Myra B. Home. Have two children: Mary Elizabeth Lord, born January 3, 1881, and Edward Oliver Lord, Jr., born January 27, 1882."

HENRY GOODWIN McKAYE.

Born at New York, March 15, 1856. Was in our Class all four years. Studied medicine at the Harvard Medical School.

Not heard from.

CHARLES JEREMIAH MASON.

Born at Boston, September 25, 1855. "I was quite ill at the beginning of '78's Junior year, and in the middle of that year I went abroad in consequence, not returning till '78 had graduated. This ought to have put me back into '80; but by the kindness of the Faculty — owing mainly to dear old Dr. Peabody's strenuous support of my interests, since he and my father had been such firm friends — I was allowed, if I could pass the required 'specials,' to go on with '79. This I did, in the hottest summer that has ever turned that awful place in summer — Cambridge — into an oven. To my own complete surprise, I accomplished the year's work — and none too easy electives, either — in six weeks, coming off with flying colors. I never had better marks while I was in College. One elective, I must confess, was somewhat of a pious fraud. It was our old crony, 'Arrian's Anabasis,' with dear old Professor Sophocles, — God rest his soul! The joke, however, lay not in the easy nature of the Greek to be prepared, but in the fact that the dear old gentleman forgot all about the Greek, after a few questions which showed I knew something about the subject, and lit out on Dennis Kearney! For about an hour he and I, in the privacy of the professor's rooms, paid the 'sand-lot orator' such compliments as would almost have come up to some of his own mildest bursts of eloquence!

"So much for my college-days, beyond what you already know. I am glad I had a taste of '79; for I can now consider that I belong to two of the best Classes which have graduated from Harvard for a good many years; and I made, too, one or two delightful friendships in '79.

"The year following my graduation I spent in Florida, travelling about and seeing the sights. While there I discovered — dug up myself out of an Indian mound at Yalaha — a small baked clay Egyptian mummy. How it ever got there nobody has yet been able to decide to a certainty. If genuine, it may have been a small household god, — hardly a charm, since it represents a mummy! — one of the Lares or Penates of those old fellows; kept, perhaps, as a memorial of some dead grandmother, or the like. Professor Baird and Dr. Rau, at the Smithsonian, in Washington, thought it quite curious, but did not examine it critically. General Loring, at the Boston Art Museum, was still more perplexed. It was not till I reached Cambridge, my Alma Mater, and the Peabody Museum, with my 'ancient baby,' that Professors Putnam and Wadsworth — after examining it, one evening, under the microscope — were compelled to pronounce it, in their opinion, Baltimore clay, baked and fashioned to order à la mummy, Anno Domini 1900 or thereabouts. Even now they won't swear to its being a hoax, but they were strongly of the opinion at the time that it must be.

"After my return from my trip to Florida, and a summer most happily spent at Mount Desert, I settled down at Middletown, Conn., for the next three years in the Berkeley Divinity School, Bishop Williams President, to study for the Episcopal ministry; and these years were for some reasons some of the best of my life. In May, 1883, I was ordained deacon in the Protestant Episcopal Church of America, by Bishop Paddock, of Massachusetts, at Middletown, Conn., with my other classmates, after having passed in Massachusetts my full canonical examinations for priest's orders in advance. The first Sunday evening after my ordination, I preached my first sermon in Holy Trinity, Middletown, where I had been ordained, the last which my dear mother ever heard on earth. In less than three weeks from that time, she had died. A hard loss to bear, but an additional consecration to my life's work.

"Before my ordination, I had been called to be assistant at Saint Anne's, Annapolis, Maryland. I went as soon after my mother's burial as I could; but severe illness brought me North again for the summer. I returned again in the autumn; and again, for the same cause, was obliged to leave.

"I finally settled down here, in Philadelphia, as assistant to the Rector of the French Church of Saint Sauveur, where I have been working for some months like a horse, at the missionary and other work of the parish."

JOSEPH MEINRATH.

Born at Boston, February 22, 1857. "Left College at the end of the Junior year. Accepted position in the Boston post-office the April following. Composed 'Phaeton Galop,' which was played by the orchestra at the Park Theatre, and published by Messrs. O. Ditson & Co. After leaving the post-office was clerk with L. Pickett & Co., 396 to 414 Atlantic Avenue, canners, packers, curers, inspectors, and dealers in all kinds of salt-water fish.

"Am now conducting, in connection with my brother, a merchandise brokerage business, with offices at Omaha and at Kansas City and St. Joseph, Mo., and doing '78 no dishonor.

"Have thus far resisted all maiden smiles and widows' wiles."

JONAS MICHAEL MILES.

Born at Brookline, Mass., November 27, 1857. "I spent the summer of 1878 at Cambridge, and in the fall joined the Class of '79. Left College in the spring of 1879. Studied law in Worcester two months in the office of Messrs. Staples & Goulding, and in Boston with Turner (C. W.) & Scaife (L. L.) from November 7, 1879, to June 21, 1882, on which latter date I was admitted to the Bar, in Boston. I have been practising law in connection with Turner & Scaife, at 23 Court Street, since my admission to the Bar.

"Married, January 16, 1883, at Brookline, to Lizzie Baxter James, daughter of Horace and Elizabeth B. James, of Brookline. Son, Herbert James Miles, born October 22, 1883, at Brookline.

"I have had excellent health and have been as busy as I expected to be since July, 1882."

ISAAC BONNEY MILLS.

Born at Boston, December 8, 1854. "I did not graduate with the Class of '78, but was prevented by ill-health from completing the full course, terminating my connection with the College at the close of the Junior year. Am glad to say, however, that at the present time I am in good health and spirits, and, though regretting the necessity that compelled me to sever my connection with the Class, my remembrances of college-days are of the pleasantest character, and my best wishes for the success of classmates more fortunate than myself will ever continue. As to the time that has elapsed since, my career has been a comparatively uneventful one. A sea voyage to South America and the West Indies fully restored my health; an experience as a stock-broker's clerk gave me some insight into the workings of Wall Street and State Street; and at present I have settled down to the constant application of a mercantile life. I occupy the position of cashier and accountant for the firm of Mills Brothers, Boston.

"My address is No. 379 Beacon Street, Boston."

E. D. MORGAN.

(ALFRED WATERMAN MORGAN.)

Born at Throg's Neck, N. Y., October 19, 1854. Was in the Class of 1877, joined our Class Freshman year, and was with it into the Junior year. The Secretary of 1877 says of him in his last Report: "He writes: 'For the first year after leaving College, I was clerk in E. D. Morgan's office; since then my business has been that of trustee with my grandfather, E. D. Morgan, of the "Car Trust of New York," and of "The New York and Pacific Car Trust Association."

"'Married, March 15, 1880, to Mary Brewer Penniman, in New York City.

"'Address, 413 Fifth Avenue, or 54 Exchange Place, New York City.'"

EDWARD LELAND MORSE.

Born at Dover, N. H., June 12, 1855. "The Faculty and I were unable to agree as to the exact proportion of work and play I should do; and in November, 1877, I left Cambridge. I journeyed several stades to the avuncular mansion in New Hampshire, and after a respectable halt turned my face towards the setting sun. Journeying West by leisurely stages, I at last arrived at what was then the Ultima Thule of civilization, — Trinidad, Colorado, — and 'struck a job' at keeping books. I stayed in Colorado till June, when I returned to Illinois. There were divers causes which made me leave; perhaps one was that a man never knew when he was going to have his throat cut. I had the nozzle of a gun pushed into my face twice, and it grew monotonous, as it were; besides, some unregenerate thief stole my mule which I intended to start for Prescott with. Prairie Dick had just cleaned out the town, and the night before I narrowly escaped getting shot; so I did n't resist the temptation to board the first passenger train East. I then became a clerk in the employ of the Chicago & Alton Railroad at Kansas City."

In May, 1881, he was employed by the North Chicago Rolling Mills.

Was married, June 20, 1879, at Springfield, Ill., by Rev. Robert Nourse, to Katherine Tumay, of Adare, Ireland.

FRANK FULLER MURDOCK.

Born at Quincy, Mass., May 18, 1857. Was with the Class Freshman year. "I gave up my College work just after the semi-annuals, 1879, — by doctor's orders, — on account of poor eyesight. In September, 1879, I entered Bridgewater State Normal School. Completed the advanced course. Taught in Shirley, Quincy, and am Master of the Morse School, Somerville, Mass."

JOHN LORING NICHOLS.

Born at Boston, July 6, 1856. Was with our Class Freshman year. Graduated with '79. The Secretary of '79, in his last Report, prints Nichols's own account of himself, as follows: "When I left College I had not fully determined whether I should adopt a profession or not. In the fall of 1879 I entered the Harvard Law School, where I remained more than a month. At the end of that time I had determined that the law was not for me, or rather that I was not for the law, so I gave it up. I then entered my father's employ, as wharfinger in charge of Caswell's Wharf [Charlestown], one of the wharves which he leased. On the 1st of March, 1882, my father, John C. Nichols, my uncle, Robert C. Nichols, and myself were incorporated under the laws of Massachusetts as the Fiske Wharf and Warehouse Company, to do a general wharfage, storage, teaming, and lightering business; of that corporation John C. Nichols is Treasurer and I am President.

"Was married, May 23, 1882, to Emma A. Taylor."

JOHN O'CONNER.

Born at Chicago, Ill., August 18, 1852. Left our Class in the Sophomore year. He practised law at Huron, Dakota Territory, for a time; and is now a member of the firm of Follansbee & O'Conner, Attorneys-at-Law, corner of La Salle and Madison Streets, Chicago, Ill.

GOUVERNEUR MORRIS OGDEN.

Born at Newton, N. Y., August 1, 1857. Was in the Class of 1877. Joined our Class Freshman year, and was with us till Junior year. The Secretary of 1877 says of him in his last Report: "He writes: 'I am a lawyer in the office of Messrs. Man & Parsons, 56 Wall Street, New York City. Received from Columbia College the degree of LL.B., and was admitted as an attorney and counsellor of the New York Supreme Court, in May, 1879.'

"Address, 9 West 10th Street, New York City."

HARRISON GRAY OTIS.

Born at Nahant, Mass., July 18, 1856. Was with our Class all four years. "I was clerk in the wool house of Gray, Dewey, Gould, & Co., where I was from January 1, 1879, till January 1, 1884. Am a wool broker now, on my own account, associated with W. T. Eldridge, under the name of Eldridge & Otis, with an office at 29 High Street, Boston."

HENRY SHARWOOD OTIS.

Born at Rye, N. H., July 1, 1855. "I left the Class at the end of the Freshman year. Was in business for some time after that (between three and four years), and then went into the Medical School. I received the degree of M.D. from the Harvard Medical School. I took my diploma, June, 1883.

"I served as house officer in The Children's Hospital, Boston, then went to the Hartford Hospital, where I had an appointment for one year, — six months as Assistant Resident Surgeon, and six months as Resident Physician and Surgeon. The year ended March 1, 1884.

"I have now settled in Hartford, in the practice of medicine."

WILLIAM ELIAS PAGE.

Born at Neponset, Mass., July 16, 1856. He was in our Class through the Freshman year and afterwards with '79.

"I was first clerk with Whitney Brothers & Co., merchants, doing business at Boston, Mass., also New York and Calcutta, and am now in a shipping business at Pará, Brazil.

"Was married to Kate A. Read, of Brooklyn, N. Y., September 6, 1883."

HERBERT PARKER.

Born at Charlestown, Mass., March 2, 1856. "I left College on account of ill-health in the winter of the Senior year, and have never taken a degree. Since leaving Cambridge, I have read law in the office of the Hon. George F. Hoar, in Worcester. Was absent one year abroad. Returned, and was admitted to the Worcester Bar in June, 1882. Have since practised in Worcester, and have also an office in Clinton, Mass. With the exception of being a member of the School Committee, and some other boards in the town of Lancaster during the last three years, I have held no positions of public trust. Have passed one winter in Washington as acting private secretary to Senator Hoar. I have written nothing except occasional letters of travel, or other articles, for the Worcester 'Spy,' and 'Forest and Stream.' I have served as secretary to the Republican Town Committee of Lancaster for several years, and have attended various conventions as delegate.

"My address is Lancaster, Mass."

GUSTAVUS SWAN PARSONS.

Born at Columbus, Ohio, January 26, 1855. Was in the Class of 1877, and in our Class Freshman year.

Is married to a Miss Herron.

ARTHUR EBEN PERRY.

Born at New Bedford, Mass., March 3, 1857. "Left College January 1, 1877. Commenced the study of law, May 1, 1877, in the office of Marston & Crapo, in New Bedford. Spent the College year of 1878–79 at the Boston University Law School. Was admitted to the Bar, July 9, 1879, and have since been practising my profession in New Bedford, associated with the Hon. H. M. Knowlton, district attorney of the southern district of Massachusetts. Am somewhat interested in municipal politics, and have been a member of the New Bedford City Council for the past three years; but that is the extent of the honors thrust upon me up to the present time."

* PHILIP ALLEN POST.

Born at New York, November 27, 1855. Died at Newport, R. I., December 26, 1875. He was the son of Edwin Augustus and Margaret Oliver (Gibbes) Post. Entered College with the Class of 1877, and was in our Class Freshman year.

GEORGE WINTHROP PRATT.

Born at South Malden, Mass., February 22, 1855. "I left the Class at the end of the Sophomore year, on account of ill-health. After remaining at home — Eddyville (Middleborough), Mass. — till my health was restored, I entered on work connected with the editorial department of the Boston 'Daily Advertiser,' a position which I now hold."

EDWARD OSGOOD RICHARDS.

Born at New York, January 18, 1857. "Left College November 1, 1877, because of the death of my brother. Went into a commission export business at 39 Broad Street, New York, firm name E. O. Richards. Continued there until July 3, 1879. Was then taken down with sunstroke, and sick until October, the same year. Went West on railroad business; returned in April, 1880; and April 9, 1880, was elected Secretary of the Watkins Signal Telegraph Co., 294 Broadway, New York; since that time I have continued in this business. Am Secretary of the 'Automatic Fire Alarm and Extinguisher Co.,' and Treasurer of the 'Alden Type Machine Co.,' both of New York."

HENRY WILLIAM ROBINSON.

*GURDON SALTONSTALL.

Born at Salem, Mass., August 15, 1856. Died at Pau, France, May 21, 1878. He was the only son of Henry and Georgiana Crowninshield (Silsbee) Saltonstall.

From an early age he displayed a remarkable taste for natural history, which he studied diligently, passing a portion of his time with the United States Fish Commission.

He fitted for College in Boston, and entered with honors in Latin. His preparatory tutor has said of him: "Of all my pupils, Gurdon was the one in whom I took the most pride, and whom I loved the best; and his splendid qualities of mind and character won my admiration and affection, as they did of every one he met." He soon took a high rank in the class and in the esteem of his instructors and classmates; and while gaining friends by his pleasant manners, and his remarkable generosity in helping others, he lost none of that dignity that is so often sacrificed to good fellowship.

It had been his habit to spend portions of his summers in fishing and hunting excursions; and for his Freshman vacation he had planned an extensive canoeing trip through Lake Champlain, and the Richelieu and St. Lawrence Rivers. During this trip he experienced hardships and exposures exceptionally severe, and returned home in a very exhausted condition. While yet not entirely recovered, he returned to College, but soon had to yield to increasing illness, which had settled upon his lungs.

The greater part of the next two years he was travelling or living in such climates as it was hoped would benefit him, always accompanied by friends and the most faithful and efficient of attendants; but in the spring of 1878 he became rapidly worse, and died at Pau on the 21st of May.

During his visits home he met his classmates with great delight, but strove, with his usual consideration, to hide from them the sadness he felt at the ruin of his own hopes. His sufferings, which were very great, he bore with a bravery which was one of his distinguishing characteristics, and with a patience and serenity which made it difficult for others to realize how ill he was.

But apart from this suffering and disappointment, "his life was a happy one while it lasted, and it has left behind, sweet memories and an honorable name. He made the achievements suited to his years, was universally liked and respected, succeeded in what he undertook, and had a happy home. Upon the Memorial Window erected to his memory in the chapel of the First Church of Christ, in Boston, is the appropriate inscription: 'Wisdom is gray hairs unto a man, and an unspotted life is old age.'"

C. W. H.

JOHN CORNELIUS SHEA.

Born at Cambridge, February 2, 1856. Was with our Class Freshman year. Was in the Class of 1879 in 1875–76; taught in Wheeling, W. Va., for a year, and then entered the Boston University Law School, where he graduated, with the degree of LL.B., in 1879.

ARTHUR MURRAY SHERWOOD.

Born at Keene, N. H., August 20, 1856. "I joined the Class of '78 in Freshman year; was dropped from '77. Remained in College until the middle of Junior year, when I came to New York. Have been connected since that time with the New York 'World' and the New York 'Times.' Since November, 1879, have been in the banking house of Edward Sweet & Co., No. 38 Broad Street, New York.

"Please send any communications to University Club, New York City."

EDWIN DAY SIBLEY.

Born at Boston, April 8, 1857. Was with our Class all four years.

"1878–79, Cambridge. 1879–80, reading law on Devonshire Street, Boston. 1880–81, Harvard Law School. I am practising law in Boston."

Is living at 32 Adams Street, Charlestown, Mass.

HENRY SIGOURNEY.

Born at Boston, February 27, 1855. He was connected with the Class of 1877 in their Freshman and Sophomore years, and with our Class in our Sophomore year. After leaving College he passed two years travelling in this country, and now lives in Boston, at 77 Beacon Street. Is married.

WYLLIS AUGUSTUS SILLIMAN.

Born at Clarkson, N. Y., December 15, 1857. "I entered Yale College as Freshman in 1874, but removed to Harvard in the autumn of 1875, and joined the Class of '78. I remained with you till the close of the Junior year. After passing the next year in study at home and in travel, I entered Union College, where I was graduated in 1879. March, 1880, I sailed for Europe in order to continue my favorite studies in biology; and following the beaten track of American students, went to the University of Leipzig. The choice of this university was in so far fortunate, as that I met there an old and valued friend, Mr. George Dimmock ('77). I separated from him, June, 1881, and went to Paris, attracted by the reputation of M. Henri de Lacaze-Duthiers of the Sorbonne. The summer was passed in zoölogical work at the maritime station of Roscoff, just as the preceding summer had been passed at the zoölogical station in Trieste. Shortly after my return to Paris in the autumn of 1881, I was rejoined by Dr. Dimmock and family. We remained in the queen of cities until February, when we removed to Banyuls-sur-Mer, Pyrénées-Orientales, to enjoy the facilities for work offered by the zoölogical laboratory that had just been founded there by the efforts of M. de Lacaze-Duthiers. I came home in June, 1882, and began a series of researches on the lower groups of animals. Some of the results of my work are embodied in the 'Beobachtungen über die Süsswasserturbellarien Nord-America's' published last winter in Würzburg, as Inaugural Dissertation for the purpose of obtaining the degree of Ph.D. Another scientific communication of mine is that 'Sur un nouveau Type de Turbellariés,' in the 'Comptes Rendus' of the Academie des Sciences, Paris, December 19, 1881.

"Address, Clarkson, N. Y."

HERBERT SMITH.

Born at Clifton, Ohio, December 15, 1852. Was with our Class till early in the Sophomore year. On leaving College he returned to his home at Philadelphia, and there he is now living.

He has been married.

SAMUEL ELLSWORTH SOMERBY.

Born at Waltham, Mass., August 31, 1856. "I entered the Class of '78 in the fall of 1878 at the beginning of the term, and left it in the early part of December, 1878, on account of sickness. Joined the Class of '79 the next year, and graduated with that Class, to whose Secretary I make my report."

The Secretary of 1879, in his last Report, says: "Has not been heard from; Secretary understands he is practising law in Boston."

EDWARD EPPES SPARHAWK.

Born at Boston, December 6, 1852. He was a member of the Class of 1877, and became connected with our Class Sophomore year, remaining with us till we graduated. The Secretary of 1877 says of him in his last Report: "After finishing at Cambridge he obtained a position as an assistant teacher in the Evening School in Newton, Mass., and was subsequently appointed principal of the Jackson Grammar School in that place. He is the first assistant in the Dudley Street Evening School, Boston, devoting the day to reading law."

EDMUND CRAWLEY SPINNEY.

Born in Nova Scotia, in 1845. Was connected with our Class for a short time in the early part of the Senior year. "I have been and am pastor of the First Baptist Church, Burlington, Iowa; also President of the Burlington College, Burlington, Iowa. I have held the position of a Director in the Hebrew School, Chicago, Ill. I have written for the press, and edited one of the departments in 'The Pulpit and Pew.' I have also edited a twelve-paged paper in the interests of the society I have served. I have occupied positions of honor and trust in the Iowa Baptist State Convention. In June, 1881, 'The Central University of Iowa' conferred upon me the degree of D.D.

"I was married in Charlestown, Mass., in 1872. My wife's maiden name was Josephine S. Chase. Maud J. Spinney was born in Concord, N. H., July 2, 1877. Blanche G. Spinney was born in Burlington, Iowa, June 11, 1882."

EDWARD STACKPOLE.

Born at Boston, September 28, 1855. Was connected with our Class in the Freshman and Sophomore years.

*THEODORE FISKE STIMPSON.

Born at Boston, June 9, 1855. Died at Boston, October 19, 1875. He was the son of Frederic Henry and Sarah Matilda (Fiske) Stimpson, and the youngest of nine children.

He was a graduate of the Phillips Grammar School, and entered the English High School about the year 1870, his father intending to educate him for a mercantile life; but so strong was his desire to fit himself for a profession that he entered the Boston Latin School in 1872, though after remaining a few months he was obliged to leave in consequence of trouble with his eyes. Continuing his preparation for College with private tutors, he entered the Freshman Class in the autumn of 1874. He was chosen Secretary at the first meeting of the Class on October 8, 1874, and was re-elected to that position at the meeting on October 7, 1875. In the same month he was taken suddenly ill with typhoid fever, and died after a few days' illness.

Stimpson was a man of studious habits, and was particularly interested in mathematics, a study in which he displayed much ability. He was interested in the Church of the Good Shepherd in Boston, then a mission of Emmanuel Church, and thoroughly identified himself with the work of the mission; and being very musical, and especially fond of the organ, he often played for extra services at the church. He also held the position of choir-master, and taught in the Sunday-school both music and Bible lessons, exercising a strong influence over all the children with whom he came in contact. His character was that of a thoroughly good man, and he was loved and most highly respected by his friends and classmates. He was unselfish and thoughtful for others, always ready to excuse their shortcomings, when they fell below his own standard of what was right, and seemed excellently fitted for the ministry, the profession which he had intended to pursue. There are few men who die leaving the memory of so high a character and so pure a life.

H. W.

ROBERT TALLANT.

Born at San Francisco, California, October 29, 1856. Was a member of 1877, and connected with our Class but a short time in the Junior year, when he rejoined his own Class and graduated with them.

Has been in business in San Francisco.

HERBERT TAPPAN.

Born at Boston, May 6, 1857. He was connected with our Class Freshman year, and afterwards with the Class of '79, graduating with them. "I was in the office of the Burlington & Missouri River Railroad, in Nebraska, at Omaha, until May, 1880. Since then I have been in the employ of Andrew Onderdonk, the contractor for the section of the Canadian Pacific between Port Moody and Savona Ferry, in British Columbia. At present I am employed on sub-contracts which I have received from Onderdonk & Co. I have about a hundred Celestials working for me, and am kept pretty busy looking after them.

"I have also taken a twenty-thousand-dollar contract to fence the line with barbed wire from Yale to Port Moody, a distance of about ninety miles, and shall start work on it next summer [1884]. So you see I have my hands full.

"Have written two articles for the 'New England Historic and Genealogical Register.'

"My address is Yale, British Columbia."

FREDERICK WINTHROP THAYER.

Born at Belmont, Mass., August 14, 1854. Was with our Class all four years. "November, 1878, I went into offices, at Omaha, of Burlington & Missouri River Railroad, in Nebraska. Remained there until January 1, 1880. Returned to Boston to take position of clerk with Hilton, Weston, & Co., wool merchants, with whom I am at this writing."

WILLIAM FITZGERALD TOWNE.

Born at Fitchburg, Mass., July 18, 1855. Was with our Class Freshman year, and afterwards with 1879. After leaving College, he became connected with the Fitchburg Railroad Co., and afterwards became New England Agent for some Southwestern railways, with an office in Boston. He is now General Eastern Agent of the Missouri Pacific Railway Company, with an office at 243 Broadway, New York.

Was married in Boston, February 11, 1880, to Helen Sykes. Son, Percy, born December 20, 1880.

MARTIN VAN BUREN.

Born at New York, March 4, 1856. Was connected with our Class till towards the end of the Senior year.

GEORGE CURWIN WARD.

Born at Malden, Mass., March 19, 1855. Was connected with our Class in the Senior year.

*ERNEST UPTON WATERS.

Born at Waterville, Maine, December 15, 1854. Died at Worcester, Mass., May 4, 1878. He was the son of George Frank and Amelia Flint (Upton) Waters.

His mother wrote the following, at the request of the Secretary: —

"He entered Harvard College in the autumn of 1874, when nineteen years old, without conditions and with honors in classics. He had previously taken a classical course of four years at the Newton High School under the superintendence of Mr. Francis V. Waterhouse, who was also his friend during his college life.

"He was a devoted son and brother, loving, self-sacrificing, and generous to a fault, genial, manly, and kind to all.

"Mr. Waterhouse, in writing of his school-days, has said: 'He entered the Newton High School in the fall of 1870. For the first two years of his course he did not recite to me. For the last two years he recited to me daily. Naturally I became quite intimately acquainted with him during the latter period; nor during the former did he by any means escape my notice. He was too clever a boy for that. From the first I could not fail to notice his eager desire for knowledge. His fund of general information was, for a boy, remarkable. He had great love for the truth. This led him to take good care that his utterances respecting any matter should conform to what he knew about it, and he was much given to qualifying his statements. But not alone in this way did his love of truth manifest itself. He made it his constant endeavor to see things as they are. No pains were too great for him to take in getting right views; nor was he ever satisfied with anything short of right views. Ernest had a very acute moral sense. He was not, however, at all morbid.

He was a genial young fellow; there was nothing of the moral peacock about him, nothing of austerity. He was very liberal in his interpretations of the motives of others, however critical he might be in regard to his own. I never had under my charge a young man of greater promise. I predicted for him a career of eminent usefulness in the world. That he should have been cut down just as he had completed his preparation for such a career is to me a mystery. I cannot even pass over the threshold of it, so to speak, much less penetrate it. I can only rest in the faith that He who so ordered it never does otherwise than the best for His children.'

"A classmate and friend writes thus of him: 'That Waters stood high in the rank-list none of his classmates need be reminded; but in spite of this his books did not claim his whole time, for no one of us better than he knew the few woods — the few unspoiled places — within tramping distance of Cambridge. The first violet he was sure to find, and to hear the first song of the birds in spring. Nor was it only for Nature's voice that his ear was keen. He was a lover of good music, and never would miss an oratorio. The last one he went to hear was "The Creation," and on that Easter Sunday he went home to die.

"'His high rank he fully earned. Whatever he had in hand to do, that he did with heart and soul; consequently he succeeded everywhere. In the prescribed college work he stood as high as in his electives; and far above the petty woes of our Freshman and the hard hills of our Sophomore years Waters soared. True, he depended upon high rank for the necessary scholarship, but he was driven by a far sterner taskmaster than poverty of this world's goods. His aspiration was to tell to others the loveliness and the glory of his wider horizon. Poet, or artist, or preacher? He was himself in doubt which calling to follow. For either he was of brilliant promise. As a friend he was quick to sympathize or to rejoice as opportunity offered, and in turn grateful as a child for such friendly offices. Remembrance of him will ever delight those who knew him.'

"He was a member of the Phi Beta Kappa, and served on one of the committees of the Society.

"The last three years of his course he had suffered from headaches; but consulting Dr. Tyler, the expert in mental diseases, he did not advise him to leave College, but to take plenty of exercise; this he did, joining the Boat Club and rowing frequently.

"The exciting cause of his death was a fall the last day of the Fast vacation, which resulted in congestion of the brain. He was buried at Mount Auburn, with every mark of respect and tenderness, by the Class and Faculty of the College, May 8, 1878, about a month before the time of graduation. He had written his part, and was to have been Class Poet; but, as Dr. Peabody said of him in the Baccalaureate Sermon, 'he was translated to the realm of purer song than could have found voice in earthly rhythm.'"

At a meeting of the Class held in Holden Chapel these resolutions were adopted: —

"The members of the Senior Class of Harvard College unitedly mourn the sudden death of Ernest Upton Waters, as taking from them the companionship and example of one whose intellect was quick and powerful; whose refined imagination and skilful hand had already won praise in poetry and art; whose scholarship was perfect; whose heart was pure, great beyond his years, and full of love for God and man and Nature, — for all but self. Yet our own grief seems little to us as we think of the bereaved family who have till now enjoyed his most intimate love. To them we tender heartfelt sympathy."

JOHN WALTER WELLS.

Born at Chicopee Falls, Mass., December 10, 1854. Was connected with our class Freshman year, and was afterwards with '79, graduating with that Class. In 1881 he was in the machine shop of the Merrimac Manufacturing Co., at Lowell, Mass.

Was married, in the early autumn of 1884, to Miss Livermore.

JAMES ALLEN WETHERBEE.

Born at Charlestown, Mass., May 23, 1855. Was connected with our Class all four years. In 1881 he wrote: "Six months in a broker's office, six months in railroading, six months travelling in Colorado, four months in Texas, and now looking into the sheep business at Mr. C. F. Paul's ranch, twenty miles northwest of Fort Griffin, Texas."

Has not been heard from since.

BERNARD WIESENFELD.

Born at Baltimore, Md., December 29, 1857. "Was of Class of '78 as Freshman, Sophomore, and Junior, leaving after the Christmas holidays of Junior term, with broken-down health; and since 1879 have been engaged in business, being connected with the firm of Wiesenfeld & Co., of Baltimore, manufacturers of clothing. The above house was established by my father, Moses Wiesenfeld, in 1830, and is still engaged in the manufacture of clothing. It was the first establishment of the kind in Baltimore."

CHARLES HENRY WISWELL.

Born at Little Falls, N. Y., August 30, 1852. "Being forced by ill health to leave College early in 1874, I was in the Class of '78 during the Freshman year; but having made up lost work during that year, I re-entered my own Class in 1875, and graduated in 1877."

After graduation, till September, 1879, he was assistant editor of the Cambridge "Tribune," and has since been instructor in Mr. Noble's Classical School, at Boston.

Married, in Cambridge, January 1, 1880, by Dr. Peabody, to Florence B. Dexter, of Cambridge.

STEPHEN BLAKE WOOD.

Born at West Cambridge, April 5, 1854. "I left '78 at the end of the Sophomore year, was away one year, and then entered '79. Was graduated in 1879. I was at the Harvard Law School for two years, and then in the offices of Allen & Fox and of J. P. Wyman, Jr."

Is practising law, with an office at 30 Court Street, Boston.

CLASS MEETINGS.

A SPECIAL MEETING

Was held in Boston, March 13. 1879, at the Parker House, to take action on the death of our classmate, Melvin Hasbrouck.

Resolutions were adopted.

Meeting adjourned.

JOSEPH C. WHITNEY, Secretary.

THE FIRST ANNUAL MEETING

Was held in Cambridge, Commencement Day, 1879, at Holworthy 9. The Graduating Class were entertained.

The meeting was very informal.

F. L. GAY, Secretary pro tem.

A SPECIAL MEETING

Was held in Boston, December 5, 1879, at the Parker House, to take action on the death of our classmate, Edward Somerville Ellicott.

Resolutions were adopted

Meeting adjourned.

JOSEPH C. WHITNEY, Secretary.

THE SECOND ANNUAL MEETING

Was held in Cambridge on Commencement Day, 1880, at Holworthy 1.

It was voted that the custom of calling class meetings at the time of the death of classmates should be discontinued, and that the Secretary should at each Commencement Meeting notice any deaths of members that may have occurred since the previous meeting.

Class finances were discussed.

Meeting adjourned.

JOSEPH C. WHITNEY, Secretary.

THE THIRD ANNUAL MEETING

Was held in Cambridge on Commencement Day, 1881, at Stoughton 4.

Finances and particularly the College Fund were discussed.

It was voted that it should be left to subscribers to the College Fund to decide whether the accumulations of this Fund should be paid to the College, or whether the Fund should be devoted to some special object, such as placing a window in Memorial Hall.

Meeting adjourned.

JOSEPH C. WHITNEY, Secretary.

THE FOURTH ANNUAL MEETING

Was held in Cambridge on Commencement Day, 1882, at Stoughton 4.

The Secretary read a memoir of Lanier.

The Secretary stated that the collection of subscriptions to the Class Fund had been comparatively small, and that the cost of printing a Class Report would be such that the customary Commencement entertainment would have to be abandoned, unless we made so serious an inroad on our principal as would seem undesirable.

It was voted that we should have Commencement punch as usual and no Class Report.

Meeting adjourned.

JOSEPH C. WHITNEY, Secretary.

THE FIFTH ANNUAL MEETING

Was held in Cambridge on Commencement Day, 1883, at Stoughton 4.

The Secretary read a memoir of Reed.

It was voted that a Class Report should be published, and that the Secretary should provide for the payment of it in whatever manner he thought best.

It was voted that at the second Triennial Dinner each person should pay for his own dinner.

Meeting adjourned.

JOSEPH C. WHITNEY, Secretary.

THE SIXTH ANNUAL MEETING

Was held in Cambridge on Commencement Day, 1884, at Stoughton 4.

The only business before the meeting was the usual discussion of finances. A subscription paper for the Class Fund that had been started at the Triennial Dinner the previous evening was offered to members, resulting in a total subscription of $495.

Meeting adjourned.

JOSEPH C. WHITNEY, Secretary.

CLASS DINNERS.

THE FIRST TRIENNIAL DINNER

Took place at the Hotel Vendome the evening before Commencement, 1881. There were sixty-five of the Class present, and Mr. F. W. Thayer presided.

The cost of the dinner was three dollars a plate, each man present paying two dollars, and the other dollar being paid from the Class Fund.

THE SECOND TRIENNIAL DINNER

Took place at the Parker House the evening before Commencement, 1884.

In accordance with the vote of the Class the previous year, each man present paid for his own dinner. There were thirty-six of the Class present, and the Secretary presided.

We passed an extremely pleasant evening, and about midnight called on the Class of 1869, who were also dining at Parker's.

FINANCES.

In May, 1878, the Secretary sent to members of the Class then living in Cambridge a circular that contained the following: —

"Subscriptions to the Class and College Funds will soon be asked for. The Class Fund is payable in instalments of twenty per cent for five years, the College Fund in instalments of ten per cent for ten years. Last year, from a class of 191 men, 166 subscribed $10,895.00 to the Class Fund, making an average of $65.63; and 92 subscribed $5,035.00 to the College Fund, averaging $54.73."

Shortly after this circular had been sent out subscription books were passed among the Class. One set of books read: —

"CLASS FUND.

"We, the undersigned, present and past members of the Class of '78, agree to pay the sums mentioned, to Joseph C. Whitney, Class Secretary, in instalments of twenty per cent for five years, the first instalment to be due on or before September 1, 1878, and the others on the 15th day of June in each succeeding year."

The other set of books read: —

"COLLEGE FUND.

"We, the undersigned, present and past members of the Class of '78, agree to pay the sums mentioned, to Joseph C. Whitney, Class Secretary, in instalments of ten per cent yearly for ten years, the first instalment to be due on or before September 1, 1878, and the others on the 15th day of June in each succeeding year."

On these books subscribers pledged themselves to pay $4,965.00 to the Class Fund, and $1,630.00 to the College Fund; and although there was a general understanding among subscribers that one fund was for the Class and the other for the College, as the names indicated, the exact way in which they were to be used seems never to have been made clear to the minds of many of the subscribers, for neither by circular nor at any meeting of the Class previous to graduation was any definite plan indicated for the distribution of these funds or the income of them.

CLASS FUND.

This Fund was created in accordance with the custom of all the more recent Classes. These Class Funds have been in charge of the Secretaries, and from them they have paid the expenses of the Class, such as the cost of the customary entertainment on Commencement day; of printing Class Reports, circulars, etc.; of postage and stationery, and in some cases the cost of Triennial Dinners.

As it has been customary for payments of subscriptions to Class Funds to be made in instalments running over several years, the income derived from these funds for the first few years has of necessity been small. Expenses the first year after leaving College are large, including, as they do, the cost of printing the Baccalaureate Sermon, the Oration, etc., and a Class Report; the cost of the Class Book, of the entertainment of the next Graduating Class, and of several other items that do not appear in later years. It has been usual for Secretaries to pay expenses from the principal of these funds, till such time as the incomes have become sufficient to defray expenses; and it has been the custom to save from the incomes, till any outlay of principal that may have been necessary on first leaving College has been made good.

In 1878 eighty men subscribed $4,965.00 to our Class Fund; from that time till June, 1884, seventeen men subscribed $512.00; in June, 1884, seventeen men subscribed $495.00. Twelve of these last had previously made liberal subscriptions and payments to the Class Fund. The total subscriptions have amounted to $5,972.00; but of the first eighty men who subscribed, ten who subscribed $550.00 have paid nothing, several others have paid one or two instalments and nothing afterwards, and the death of three has cancelled subscriptions amounting to $135.00. Of the seventeen men who subscribed before June, 1884, ten paid cash at the time they made their subscription, and seven gave their names for $350.00; of these, six who subscribed $300.00 have paid nothing. Of the seventeen men who subscribed last June, five who subscribed $100.00 have not paid.

Expenses the first year after we graduated were $490.17, and at that time we had no income; expenses exceeded our income the following years, till at the end of 1882, when the total amount subscribed to the Class Fund was due, our expenses had amounted to $963.63, while our income had been but $249.88, which left our expenses $713.75 in excess of our income. Since 1882 our income has slightly exceeded our expenses, which have now amounted to $1,215.60, while our income has been $528.06, which leaves our expenses $687.54 in excess of our income; but now our principal will have to be called on again to pay part of the expense of printing the Class Report, for the subscriptions asked for by the Secretary in a recent circular, for this purpose, are so few that they will cover not more than a quarter to a third of the cost.

The Class Committee, at a recent meeting, decided that they could better determine at some future time, when the exact cost of the Report is known, whether it will be advisable for them to suspend the Commencement entertainment for a year or two; but that it was out of the question, for the present, to think of paying for Triennial Dinners from the Class Fund, unless liberal payments are made to it within the next two years. The Class Committee also decided to send a circular to all whose subscriptions are overdue, asking them to pay if they are able to, and if they cannot, to withdraw their subscriptions, that the Secretary's books may be cleared up, and we may see exactly where we stand.

Cash payments on subscriptions to the Class Fund have amounted to $3,964.00, and the investments stand as follows: $1,200.00 of 7% first mortgage bonds of the Kansas City, St. Joe, & Council Bluffs

Railroad, paying, after deducting premiums, about 6%, or $72.00 per annum; $1,000.00 of 5% first mortgage bonds of the Chicago and West Michigan Railroad, paying $50.00 per annum; $1,000.00 of 4% first mortgage bonds of the Leavenworth, Topeka, & Southwestern Railroad, guaranteed by the Union Pacific Railroad, paying $40.00 per annum; so that our income for the year 1885 will be not far from $160.00.

Subscriptions overdue amounting to $1,873.00 remain unpaid. The Secretary has confidence that about $500.00 of this will be paid within a short time; and trusts that all who read this statement who are behind-hand will do all in their power to make payments. He would also urge those who take any interest in the Class among the hundred and twenty-four that have been connected with the Class, but who have never paid anything to the Class Fund, to make payments to the Fund as they become able to, and not to hesitate to send small sums any more than they would hesitate to send large ones.

COLLEGE FUND.

The question whether this fund should be given to the College as collected, to do with as they thought best, or whether it should be devoted to some definite object, has already been considered at one of our Class meetings, but was not then decided, as it was thought that every subscriber should be consulted. The Class of '77 decided, by a unanimous vote of subscribers to their College Fund, to use it to place a window in Memorial Hall, and have had a place reserved for them till the accumulation of their College Fund will enable them to pay the cost of one.

It is the Secretary's purpose, after this Report has been distributed, to send a circular to each subscriber to this Fund, asking whether he is willing that his subscription to it should be used to help place a window in Memorial Hall. Meanwhile he would like to hear by letter from any who have suggestions to make in regard to this subject.

The cost of a window would be not far from $2,000.00. Our College Fund, when collected, allowing for subscriptions that will not be paid, and for a payment of $175.00 that was made from it to the College the first year after graduating, will amount to about $1,000.00. It would be several years before the interest from this sum would enable us to pay for a window, but the Secretary has assurances that, if it is decided to apply the College Fund to this purpose, there will be generous contributions towards it from many who wish to see it used in this way.

The trial balance of the College Fund is to be found on page 145.
